POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 13.—Hailed as conquering heroes, the Giants were overwhelmed with wild manifestations of frenzied fans with thunderous applause which rolled across the field in loud acclaim when the husky warriors, arrayed in all the raiment of battle, prepared to batter the Quakers once again in the fourth engagement in the world's championship series.

Another avalanche of humanity besieged the gates of the Polo Grounds ere the time for the openings to swing wide was announced and the scenes of the first day were repeated.

HELPED PLAYERS' POCKETS.

It was the last day of reckoning for the players, so far as the gate receipts went, as they were to figure in the first four games only.

SNELL SENTENCED TO DIE WEEK OF DEC. 10

CONDEMNED MURDERER OF KIRBY LISTENS STOICALLY TO WORDS OF DOOM.

Special to the Boston American.

TAUNTON, Oct. 13.—Angles Snell was to-day sentenced to die in the electric chair at Charlestown State Prison within the week beginning Sunday, December 10, 1905. The aged prisoner listened to a rehearsal of the circumstances of the murder of Millinghast Kirby, September 9, 1903, of which he was convicted, and to the sentence of death without emotion.

Preceding his actual appearance in court, while on the way here from New Bedford, Snell was evidently in excellent humor and talked and joked with his keepers. He spoke to several persons whom he knew. He retained this mood even when Judge Aiken was pronouncing the sentence. This, too, although it seems the last effort to save him has been made.

Snell was brought here from the House of Correction in New Bedford in charge of Keeper Taylor. He arrived at 9:33, and was taken directly to the Taunton Jail. He was brought to the Superior Court, where Chief Justice Aiken was on the bench just after 12 o'clock to-day. The prisoner was dressed in black, and his face bore the prison pallor.

Attorney General Parker, District Attorney Swift and Assistant District Attorney Frank Fox had arrived in court previously. Snell was accompanied by the attorneys, Hugo A. Dunnell and Joseph P. Doran, who have represented him from the time of his arrest in 1903.

"Angles Snell, stand up," said Clerk Borden. Then, after Snell arose: "Have you anything to say?"

"I am innocent," Snell replied. "I have nothing further to say."

Then Judge Aiken arose and pronounced the death sentence. Snell received it without a tremor, and the men and women who crowded the court room seemed more affected than he was.

Court adjourned immediately after the sentence was pronounced. Snell was returned to the Taunton jail. This afternoon he will be taken to Charlestown and placed in the death chamber. It is not seems improbable that any further steps will be taken to save Snell's life. His lawyers to-day in court had nothing to say.

FOUND GUILTY ON 2 COUNTS OF PERJURY

Special to the Boston American.

SALEM, Oct. 13.—Charles J. Averill was to-day declared guilty of two charges of perjury in connection with the Linehan-Pierce suit for damages.

Averill was out in court when the jury returned its verdict. District Attorney Scott Peters immediately asked Judge Gaskill to issue a capias. This was given to Deputy Sheriff Bishop, who went in search of the lawyer.

Conviction of Averill came largely from the testimony of Miss Elizabeth B. Harding, a pretty stenographer, who, hidden behind the altar of the Salem jail chapel, made stenographic notes of the conversation between the lawyer and Walter C. Daniels, now serving a sentence of eight one months for attempting to bribe Juror Goodhue.

When Daniels was brought on trial it developed that someone had been behind him in his effort to influence Juror Goodhue to act in the suit of Mrs. Catherine Lingham against Thomas W. Pierce, the Salem millionaire.

Daniels made a confession later to District Attorney Peters. The latter arranged to have Daniels send for Averill. When the lawyer came, Miss Harding was hidden so that she could not be seen and yet could hear every word of the conversation. She produced her notes in court, and the stand Averill denied that he had offered money to Daniels to secure the proper support from Juror Goodhue. He declared that Miss Harding's stenographic notes were not correct.

HYDE TO TELL ALL HE KNOWS OF EQUITABLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—James Hazen Hyde has decided to appear as a witness before the Armstrong Investigating Committee. His counsel, Samuel Untermyer, and Equitable Charles E. Hughes held a long conference, and although neither would discuss the matter it is understood that Mr. Untermyer assured Mr. Hughes that Mr. Hyde would be on hand before the inquiry is concluded.

Mr. Hyde's friends have urged him all along to appear before the committee and make a clean breast of everything questionable that occurred under the old administration of the Equitable. Others, whose names would be brought in to the scandal if Mr. Hyde were to pursue such a course, have been exerting strong influence on him to remain outside the committee's jurisdiction, but Mr. Hyde, it is said, has decided to appear and do everything possible to put himself in a more favorable light before the public.

Mr. Hyde's friends believe that he will be able to show that he was not responsible for all of the irregularities in the Equitable that have been attributed to him, and that he did not lead men of riper years and infinitely greater experience into situations which have discredited them before the public.

They believe that he will be able to enlighten the committee and the public generally in regard to the relations of Edward H. Harriman to the Equitable.

Father of Maine Death Mystery Victim Says

SON WAS MURDERED

Mrs. E. J. Cooper, in Whose Home the Tragedy Occurred, Is Under Guard.

Northey Declares That the Boy Would Never Have Taken His Own Life.

SOUTH WINDSOR, Me., Oct. 13.—"My boy was murdered; he never would have taken his own life," declared Charles D. Northey, father of Charles D. Northey, Jr., who was shot at the home of Edwin J. Cooper, on a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day.

Mr. Northey came from his home in Whitefield to assist the officers in their investigation of the mystery. He had heard that there was to be an arrest.

Until Sheriff Ham arrives from Augusta Mrs. Edwin J. Cooper will remain under detention. Since the tragedy she has been in charge of Constable B. J. Hovey and has been given a room over the general store in Windsor Centre. She has not been arrested.

After consultation with Attorney-General Hanabal Hamlin, Sheriff Ham and County Attorney Leigh decided that there was evidence enough to permit them to act. The officials were busy in Augusta to-day, before starting for Windsor, preparing the case.

Old Mr. Northey is heartbroken over the death of his son and firm in the belief that it was not an accident. He has come to Windsor to urge that some action be taken.

"I am sure that my boy would not kill himself," he said. "There was no reason why he should have done so. I cannot account for his death except that somebody must have killed him. It will be a relief to me at least to know who it was that is responsible for his death."

HAS MADE A STATEMENT.

Mrs. Cooper has made a statement to the sheriff, Mr. Leigh, and Detective Mercier, who has been working on the Hackett case at Readfield. That statement is jealously guarded. She has refused to make a statement to other than the officials on their advice.

About the grocery store at which Mrs. Cooper is staying a great crowd of people from Windsor and surrounding towns gathered to-day in anticipation of something happening. Mrs. Cooper and her husband took the attention that was paid to them calmly, and apparently were not afraid of the outcome.

So alarmed have the people become over the mysterious deaths in this vicinity recently that many of the women, especially in the farming districts, are arming themselves for protection. Therefore it was not regarded as at all unusual when Mrs. Cooper went to a hardware store in Augusta and purchased a revolver, the weapon with which Northey was slain.

BICYCLE IS MISSINGG.

Hints of the popular feeling reached the ears of the county officials and they promptly went into executive session, after which it was announced unofficially that an arrest would soon be made. From an authoritative source it is learned that they decided to arrest one of the suspects now under surveillance. The Attorney

TWO BOSTON GIRLS IN GOLF SEMI-FINALS

MISSES MARGARET CURTIS AND PAULINE MACKAY IN CHAMPIONSHIP CONTEST.

Special to the Boston American.

CONVENT STATION, N. J., Oct. 13.—The semi-finals in the tournament for the national women's golf championship began at 11 o'clock to-day on the Morris County links, with three out of the four contestants coming from Massachusetts. Two of them are Boston girls, so the Hub has two chances out of four for the national cup and the Bay State has three chances out of four.

The two Boston girls are Miss Margaret Curtis of Essex and Miss Pauline Mackay of Oakley Country Club. The third Bay State girl is Miss G. H. Keyes of Concord. The fourth player, and a formidable rival of her opponents, is Miss Georgiana Bishop of Bridgeport, Ct., the present national champion.

A crowd of spectators came out on the links to-day to see the semi-finals. Miss Curtis and Miss Keyes, two of the Bay State girls, are scheduled—by the tournament drawings, to play each other, which will eliminate one of the Bay State girls from the finals anyway. Miss Bishop and Miss Mackay will meet in the other semi-final match. In order to keep the engagement in the finals to-morrow.

In any event the girls will receive medals for reaching the semi-finals, and one will receive a silver medal for being runner up.

The great match yesterday was that between Miss Margaret Curtis and Mrs. Charles T. Stout of Philadelphia, who, as Miss Genevieve Hecker, was champion in 1901 and 1902, and is this year's metropolitan champion. Miss Curtis defeated her by two up and one to play.

Miss Curtis made an excellent record at approaching and putting and outclassed her opponent in long drives.

CONFESSED SHE STOLE $14,000 TO AID FAMILY

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Confessing that she had taken from $12,000 to $14,000 of the firm's money during four years, in order to purchase medicine for a sick sister and to aid an aged father, Miss Mary E. Golding, a spinster of thirty-six years, living at No. 2404 Hart street, Brooklyn, was arraigned before Magistrate Flinn to-day. Only a charge of petit larceny was made against her. She was held for further examination.

Miss Golding was arrested after she had voluntarily made a confession. For four years she had been cashier and confidential clerk for the Larkin Soap Company, with main offices at Buffalo and a local office in White street. A few weeks ago the firm found serious shortages in their accounts, but could not discover their origin, as there were no complaints from customers nor receiving goods.

The irregularities were finally found in the firm's accounts with the Colonial Trust Company. A private detective concern was retained, but could discover nothing. L. A. Newcomb, head of the detective agency, found Miss Golding waiting for him at his office yesterday. She said to him:

"I have a tale to tell you. I am going to make a confession rather than have suspicion fall on any innocent person connected with the concern. I have been stealing from $10 to $25 a day for the past four years from the petty cash drawer. I have spent the money purchasing medicine and delicacies for my invalid sister in Buffalo. I have also sent $10 each week to Buffalo to support my aged father and mother."

Miss Golding's salary was $15 a week. She was handed over to Detective Sergeant Foy, who arraigned her to-day before Magistrate Flinn. She will be examined later.

WARRANTS OUT FOR 42 BOYS

BROCKTON, Oct. 13.—Captases have been issued for the rearrest of forty-two South Boston boys, arrested at the Brockton fair charged with being idle and disorderly. The boys were fined from $2 to $10 each and were given until to-day to settle. None of them appeared in court. Officers are to be sent to Boston to round them up.

KILLS BURGLAR BUSY AT SAFE

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Oct. 13.—An unidentified burglar was shot and killed while attempting to break open the safe in the grocery store of Jamieson & Gallivan, at Sheldon, ten miles from here, early to-day, by Eugene W. Trudeau, a clerk in the store.

Trudeau sleeps in a room over the store, and was awakened early to-day by sounds beneath him. Looking through an open register he saw the burglar working at the safe. He drew a revolver and fired through the register.

The burglar entered the man's head back of the right ear, and he fell dead. The man is believed to have been one of a gang of burglars who recently have broken into many stores and postoffices in this section of Vermont.

EAGLE IN SMOKESTACK.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Oct. 14.—An American eagle measuring a little more than four feet from tip to tip was removed from one of the smokestacks of the Sioux City Tractionn company after a desperate struggle in which the eagle succeeded in putting four tractionn company employes hors de combat.

BOILER BURSTS; GIRL BURNED

Della Galvin of No. 35 Ocean street, Lynn, was burned to-day by the explosion of the furnace boiler in the basement of Lawrence J. Killian's residence, where she is employed.

When she heard the explosion Miss Galvin ran down cellar and was confronted with a cloud of steam and smoke. Without waiting, she rushed out to the street, crying "Fire!" at the top of her lungs. Then she fell in a faint from burns and fright. Harry Katzes, who happened to be on the street corner waiting for a car, heard her shouts and ran to her aid. He carried her to the veranda and then went down cellar to see what had happened.

Meanwhile Mrs. Killian dashed out of the house with her four-year-old boy in her arms, neither injured in the least.

The explosion was caused by the water being empty when the fire was started in the furnace.

"MY SON WAS MURDERED," SAYS FATHER OF NORTHEY

DECLARES BOY WOULDN'T HAVE TAKEN OWN LIFE

Mrs. E. J. Cooper, in Whose Home Maine Tragedy Occurred, Under Guard.

WOMAN TELLS HER STORY

General of the State personally ordered the arrest, it is said, after hearing the evidence collected by local officials.

One of the most mysterious features of the case is the disappearance of the bicycle upon which young Northey rode to the Cooper house. No one has accounted for the disappearance, and although the officials have searched in every sight and a day they can find no trace of it. Every one admits that he went to the house on a wheel. The trousers guards were found in his pocket. His father saw him from the house on the wheel. Mrs. Cooper says that he arrived on a wheel. All that Deputy Sheriff Pinkham and Coroner Plummer could find, however, that pertained to the bicycle was an oil can, that was discovered in the ashes in the kitchen stove.

The funeral of the victim of the tragedy, Charles D. Northey, was held today at his late home, about four miles from the scene of the tragedy. The services were simple and were conducted by Rev. Lewis M. Harris.

MRS. COOPER'S STORY.

The bearers were young friends of the deceased, Danforth Drake, Raymond Parr, George Stinson and Frank Partridge. The remains were interred in the family burying lot near the home.

The revolver with which the deed was committed was purchased at Cogan's hardware store in Augusta of Peter C. Coullard. Coullard recognized a picture of Mrs. Cooper as that of the woman who came into his store shortly after dinner Monday and said that she wished to purchase a revolver.

Coullard was busy at the time and took little notice of the visitor. He said he had nothing very small in a revolver, the smallest being a thirty-two-calibre, rim-fire, nickel, bone-handled revolver. He handed her the gun, and she paid for it and then asked for a box of cartridges.

Coullard says that she showed no apparent nervousness or confusion.

Officer Arthur Myron of the Augusta police department was in the store at the time, and he, too, identified the picture as that of Mrs. Cooper, adding that at the time she was dressed in a black skirt, with waist and seemed to be very composed during her purchase.

The story told by Mrs. Cooper to the coroner was substantially as follows:

"I met Charles Northey at the prayer meeting Sunday night and made an appointment for him to call at my home at noon Tuesday. Meanwhile, becoming alarmed for my own safety, I decided to purchase a revolver to be ready for what ever might come, and on Monday I went to Augusta and did so."

"After making a few other purchases I returned home. At 12:30 o'clock, as near as I can remember, Charles came to the house on a bicycle, leaving the wheel on the banking in front of the house and came in.

"He brushed against me and I suppose that he felt the hard pistol, as I had only that morning made a pocket in my outer skirt in which to carry it, and the next thing that I remember I saw the revolver and that is all that I do remember."

SAYS HE WAS JEALOUS.

When asked how she accounted for the shots in the door of the kitchen, she said she did not understand them unless Charles had shot at her.

Mrs. Cooper admits knowing Charles quite well, as he had lived at their home for over a year, and she, her husband and Charles had been out together. She also said that Charles was jealous of her husband.

The young man lived at the Cooper home for fifteen months. He and Mrs. Cooper had been seen out riding together on various times during the last six months, since he stopped work in her husband's blacksmith shop, and he had called at the house. Of late he had been keeping company with a young lady in Cooper's Mills.

WOMEN TO DINE IN MEMORIAL HALL

Memorial Hall at Harvard will entertain women at dinner on the day of the Yale game this year, contrary to a long established custom that Memorial is open only to men.

It was voted, 539 to 64, that members be allowed to bring women to a special table d'hote dinner of six courses to be served in the dining room from 11:15 to 1:15.

Woman who was the sole witness of death of young Northey in her Home. She says she can not recall how the tragedy occurred.

SUES DOCTORS AND NURSES FOR CONSPIRACY

Roslindale Man Charges Plot to Send Him to An Insane Asylum.

Charged with conspiracy and attempting to confine the plaintiff in an insane asylum, Drs. Elihu T. Sawyer of Roslindale and Henry R. Hitchcock of Hyde Park and Miss Lillian Milligan, a good-looking nurse, were arraigned to-day before Judge Sherman in the Superior Court at Dedham, as defendants in a $50,000 suit brought by Olvin H. Lufkin of No. 228 Poplar street, Roslindale.

The plaintiff maintains that on December 9, 1904, through the signed statements of the defendants, he was obliged to spend about fifteen hours in the Jamaica Plain police station and the city prison.

Alleges Unprofessional Conduct.

Not only does Mr. Lufkin charge Dr. Sawyer with endeavoring to place him in an asylum, but says in his declaration that the physicians acted toward the plaintiff's wife unprofessionally.

Attorney H. T. Richardson of Boston represents the plaintiff and Attorneys E. C. Jenney and T. W. Estey represents the defendants.

Mr. Lufkin, say his witnesses, was detained at the Jamaica Plain station on the complaint of the physicians. Mr. Lufkin after being brought to the station was examined by Dr. Sawyer and Dr. Hitchcock, who signed papers saying he was insane and ordering him taken to the Tombs for further examination by Dr. Jelley, the noted alienist.

Following the examination by Dr. Jelley in the Tombs the plaintiff was judged sane and ordered discharged.

Tell of Lufkin's Arrest.

Following the testimony of Captain Mc-Ryan and Lieutenant Sullivan, who told of Lufkin's arrest, Sergeant Ridout took the stand and told of his being informed by Dr. Hitchcock and Miss Milligan came to the substation on the afternoon of December 8 and told that their patient, Mr. Lufkin, was dangerously ill and needed police protection. Dr. Hitchcock said Lufkin had been violent all day, and had been creating a disturbance at the house. Miss Milligan told me that she had been driven out of the house, partly dressed, by Lufkin and considered him insane. I then notified Captain McBryan."

MRS. TAGGART TO GET DIVORCE, SAYS LAWYER

Prediction That To-day's Decree Will Be Bitter Disappointment to Army Man.

CUSTODY OF THE CHILDREN

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 13.—Judge S. H. Eason of the County Court, has his decision in the Taggart divorce case prepared. It will be made public at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, when court convenes specially for the purpose of rendering the decision. The lawyers of Captain and Mrs. Taggart and the parties to the suit will be present.

A prominent lawyer here who has closely watched the case says he believes the decision will be a bitter disappointment to Taggart. He says Mrs. Taggart is to get the decree of divorce. He believes the younger child will be placed in the custody of his mother, Taggart, he says, will get the older boy.

THINK BUYER OF SUIT CASES BOUGHT SHOT

MAN ANSWERING DESCRIPTION PURCHASED 30 POUNDS AT ELIOT STREET STORE.

In their effort to clear up the dress suit case mystery the police are now seeking the stores in which the supposed slayer bought two parcels on the day he purchased the suit cases.

One parcel was fourteen inches long, about seven wide and five inches deep, and the other was half as large. The big one weighed perhaps twenty pounds the other half as much. These bundles were done up in coarse paper and tied with stout hemp twine.

It is reasoned that the purchaser expected to require weights with which to sink the body and that he bought them and the suit cases on the same trip.

Al Kauffman of Berkman's store said the suspect left the suit cases and was gone an hour and a half, returning with the two bundles in his arms. He hurriedly put them into one of the cases, and after joking Mr. Kauffman about the weight and saying he wasn't going to carry the load far, passed out and toward Tremont street.

Bought Thirty Pounds of Shot.

At the store of H. M. Sanders & Co., No. 29 Eliot street, thirty pounds of shot were bought on the day the dress suit cases were purchased by a man who answered the description of the suspect. The purchase was made of Clerk Charles B. Stevens and D. O. Eaton, also noticed the man. He asked for two sizes of bird shot, and insisted that it be put up in two packages. Two pasteboard boxes were used and made into one bundle, wrapped in paper and tied with a string such as observed by Clerk Kaufman at Berkman's.

Clerk Stevens said: "I remember the sale because never before in my experience did anyone ever ask for any such quantity of shot. I was uncertain as to the price and called Mr. Eaton to settle the point. I should say the stranger was about forty years of age, with smooth face, well dressed and good looking. I took him for a business man who was going on a shooting trip, but wondered why he wanted so much shot. He would answer the general description given."

"The stranger talked right to the point. I went down cellar and procured two pasteboard boxes. These held fifteen pounds of shot each. I wrapped them up in one bundle and tied them with hemp twine. He gave me a bill, I think a $5 bill."

D. O. Eaton said: "I remember that Mr. Stevens called me to pass upon the price of the purchase. The purchaser would, to the best of my recollection, answer the description given."

Try to Identify Doctor.

Myer Rubin was called yesterday to look at a South End doctor who was thought to answer the description of the purchaser of the suit cases. With an officer he went to the vicinity of the doctor's office and, inventing an excuse for seeing the physician, rung his bell and had a long talk with him in the waiting room. In many ways the physician filled the bill, but he was hardly stout enough.

VANDERBILT AUTOIST WON DEATH RACE WITH A TRAIN

The Contest for Speed Trophy To-morrow Brings Together International Rivals.

Foreign Chauffeurs, Angry With Americans, Make Threats of Reprisals.

MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 13.—What is considered a miraculous escape from death occurred to-day on the Jericho road, over which the contestants in the race for the William K. Vanderbilt Jr., Cup will speed their automobiles to-morrow. Mr. Lyttle in his ninety-horse power Pope-Toledo was going at a high rate of speed and was approaching the Mineola crossing road when he sighted a freight train about half a mile away. Lyttle immediately put the speed of the train, thought the way would be clear by the time he reached the track and came on at unabated speed. He swerved in time to save a collision, but he shaved the back end of the last car by so narrow a margin that spectators could not see daylight between the car platform and the auto.

If the Vanderbilt race course remains in its present shape, it is practically certain that records will be broken to-morrow.

One of the Pope brothers, both of whom have machines entered, said to-day that the race must be nimbled over the course at a speed of sixty miles an hour, and added: "I hope to see the time cut to better than twenty-five minutes for the lap of 28.3 miles."

The Pope Toledo machines are very fast, and some of the knowing ones, who have seen them try out the cables, have picked them to win.

Like Fleeting Shadow.

Fleeting like a shadow, Hemery sent his eighty horse-power Darracq around the course to-day, making a lap in the exceedingly fast time of 25m. 50s. Jointly therewith, his 120 horse-power Mercedes in 25m. 10s., while some watchers caught the Italian Nazzaro in the 120 horse-power Fiat in 27m. 8ast, the Frenchman, in his 90 horse-power Renault, made a lap in the phenomenal time of 24m. 15s., according to official time pieces. There will be nineteen starters in to-morrow's race, machines representing America, Germany, France and Italy.

The race will be, in reality, a bitter contest between America on one side and France, Germany and Italy on the other. If the American contenders fail to win this year the cup will go over to Europe and must in future be raced for on foreign soil.

Charge Blocked Track.

Lancia and Nazzaro of the Italian team and Szisz and Duray of the French team charged Walter White, an American contestant, with trying to stop them in their trial runs over the course. "We will not countenance any of this," was the notice the foreigners served on White, "and will block our machines any more we will get out and throw you and the rest of the Americans out of your machines. We are not going to be fooled."

It was with matters in this evilest shape early to-day that the contestants in the final runs over the Nassau circuit. It was the last spurt they will be able to take before the race starts at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The course will be guarded to-morrow by 300 constables, and 145 deputy sheriffs. These men will be spread all over the course, which covers 283.3 miles. There will be nineteen the contestants, making the total distance 2824 miles.

This circuit is considerably faster than the one last year, and several of the drivers expressed the opinion to-day that world's records for road racing would be made.

Skilled and Daring Drivers.

There will be no accidents there, while last year there were two entering through which the cars had to travel at reduced speed. This alone is sure to make the time to-morrow much faster. The drivers are men of skill and daring, who will take all chances to win the coveted prize and the rank as a cup of greater horse power and improved in detail over those which took part in the last race.

George Heath, winner of the Vanderbilt Cup race last year, had an exciting few minutes at Jericho in the morning, when his gasoline tank exploded. He kept his head and brought the machine to a stop before much damage had been done. The car can probably be repaired in time for the big race.

None weigh more than 2,204 pounds. The first car will be started at six o'clock in the morning, and the others will follow at one minute intervals.

NURSE GETS $60,000 BY AN ENGLISH WILL

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—Nellie Harris, a trained nurse, has come from Boston, Mass., to claim a fortune of $60,000 left her by English relatives. She knew that some day she would be wealthy, but she has had no communication with her relatives in England in many years.

BIG STRIKE BREWING IN ST. PETERSBURG

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 13.—A gigantic labor strike, rivalling the one that occurred in January, is being organized here. The inhabitants are alarmed, fearing a repetition of the disorders, but the government is resolved to repress any attempt to start a labor uprising.

FOXHALL KEENE AT WHEEL OF RACING CAR.

Mr. Keene is perhaps the best known sportsman in America. He has taken part in several international motor car races and will drive a Mercedes in the Vanderbilt Cup race. Mr. Keene is one of the most daring of auto drivers, but is evidently a little superstitious, as he has protested against No. 13, which he drew for the race.

ARMY AND NAVY DEFENDED BY DEWEY, TAFT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The criticisms of the American army and navy published by the Neue Preussche Kreuz Zeitung of Berlin have provoked reports and comments from Secretary of War Taft and Admiral Dewey, the two men best qualified to reply to the German strictures.

In the criticism that the officers of the American navy are too old for the grade Admiral Dewey entirely agrees and says that the general board is now drawing up recommendations on the subject.

"The nation will assuredly meet with disaster in a naval war unless younger men are given command of the ships of our navy," he said. "Understand that in no case do I mean to criticise the officers who are now in command or have commanded our war vessels so splendidly. But I know from experience that in the stress of war we must have younger men to direct the fighting."

The admiral disputed the German paper's statement that it is impossible to get sufficient crews to man the American navy.

"On the contrary," he said, "we are able to get all the enlisted men we want—and of the very best material in the world. Such material is unequalled, because the men are all patriotic and intelligent young Americans, largely from the middle West and Southwest, and the like of which the world has never seen."

Secretary of War Taft, replying to questions regarding the criticisms on the United States Army, said vigorously:

"In all respects, man for man, our army will challenge comparison with any army in the world. The statement that the American army is rotten to the result of an extreme prejudice and hostility against an organization concerning which the detractor has no knowledge. Our army is in an excellent state of efficiency.

"An American citizen has nothing to apologize for in the personnel, courage and discipline of the army of his country, and should an emergency arise it will not be found wanting."

Secretary Taft admitted that in times of peace offers of better wages and greater opportunities to improve themselves which were furnished in this country occasioned more desertions than in countries where conditions are not so favorable to earning a living.

"But in times of war," he concluded, "when the patriotism of the youth of the nation is aroused, we have never had the slightest difficulty enlisting more men than we needed."

$250 DONATION FROM LIPTON TO COLLINS FUND

Famous Cup Challenger Contributes Toward Memorial to the Late Mayor.

EXPRESSES ADMIRATION

The Mayor Collins Memorial committee received notice to-day of a contribution of $250 for the memorial fund from Sir Thomas Lipton. Writing to a friend in this city, Sir Thomas expressed great sorrow at the death of Mayor Collins and, among other things, said:

"I can assure you it was a great shock to me when I heard of the death of our good friend, Mayor Collins. He was certainly much respected in his own city, and by all who were fortunate enough to come in contact with him."

An hour later the letter was followed by the cable, addressed to A. G. McVey, Boston:

"Would like very much to be permitted to contribute toward memorial of late Mayor Collins, for whom I had greatest possible respect and admiration. Kindly include my name in list for $250.

"(Signed) LIPTON."

MOTHER SURE DAUGHTER WED A REAL BARON

INHALED GAS; LIFE SAVED BY FIANCEE

Special to the Boston American.

WARE, Oct. 13.—"I am perfectly satisfied that Baron Camille Rynard, my daughter's husband, is all that he claims to be," said Mrs. William S. Hyde to-day, speaking of the marriage of her daughter, formerly Miss Sylvia Sage Hyde, which has caused a furore in Ware society. "Baron Rynard showed me his credentials and letters of nobility in Paris. I also saw his history in the 'Noblesse' of France. He is a genuine baron and I am satisfied with the wedding."

Mrs. Hyde thus emphatically gave denial to any comment that might be made of the genuineness of the nobleman's claims to title.

Marriage Caused Sensation.

The marriage is the sensation of the day here. Miss Hyde is not only beautiful and generally admired, but she is also wealthy. She is worth a quarter of a million in her own right and is the presumptive heir to half a million or so from her mother. She is a Smith College graduate, and has added to her education by travel.

She met Baron Rynard in Paris last June. She was travelling abroad with her mother. Mrs. Hyde and Miss Hyde returned here Saturday and Baron Rynard came with them. The Baron bought a marriage license for 50 cents of Town Clerk Abner F. Richardson, and a few hours later had gained his wealthy bride. The Baron and his bride left after the wedding for New York. They are expected back at the bride's home to-morrow. They will stay here a few days and then will leave on a tour of this country, going to Paris in December.

Mrs. Hyde, the bride's mother, expects to go to Paris this Winter to visit them.

The wedding took place in the Hyde mansion. The Rev. Arthur Adams, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, officiated.

Prisco Bridges of Barrien, Me., owes his life to his fiancee, Miss Mary E. Deacon of No. 50 Clarendon street, and her landlady, Miss Nelle A. Wallace, for to-day, when they found his unconscious from the escaping gas, they applied the means of artificial respiration and worked over him so persistently that physicians at the City Hospital say his life will be saved.

Bridges, who is forty-four, came from Maine last Tuesday to spend a few days with his fiancee, who is employed here. He took a room at No. 50 Clarendon street, a few doors away from Miss Deacon's home. He had an appointment to meet Miss Deacon to-day at 9:30 o'clock, as he was to take a train for home. He failed to keep the appointment.

The young woman went to No. 50 Clarendon street and rapped at his door. There was no answer. She aroused the landlady, Mrs. Evans, and then got Miss Wallace's aid.

The door of Bridges' room was broken down. The men was found unconscious on the floor, midst of the couch. The gas jet was only partly turned on. The police think the man blew out the gas, or turned it very low and the wind blew it out.

Miss Deacon and Miss Wallace worked over the unconscious man. They employed every known method of securing artificial respiration, and, after an hour's work, were rewarded by observing signs of returning consciousness in the man.

He was hurried to the City Hospital, where the physicians say he will undoubtedly recover.

DOW'S DAUGHTER DIES.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 13.—Miss Cornelia M. Dow, an active worker in the lines of charity, philanthropy and reform, is dead at her home in this city at the age of sixty-three years.

MORRILL FREED; THEFT CHARGE

Raleigh D. Morrill, the nephew of the late Senator Morrill of Vermont, who was arrested September 30, charged with the larceny of goods valued at $202 from a trunk and suit case at the South station, was discharged to-day when his case came up in the Municipal court. The case was not pressed, the Boston Terminal Company announcing that the young man had made restitution.

WILL RAISE WAGES OF BERLIN STRIKERS

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—It is reported that the electrical firms, the workmen in which recently went on strike, have agreed to raise the wages of screwmakers and packers, which was the original question that caused the strike, and they have also agreed to the appointment of a mixed commission of equal numbers of employers and employes, to investigate the causes of dispute.

DEATH THREAT FOR A CHILD

GORHAM, N. H., Oct. 13.—John O'Connor, proprietor of the Mount View Hotel at Gorham, has received two letters threatening his infant boy, children's nurse, if he does not accede to the writer's demands for money.

In them it is specified that he is to pay $1,500 or have one of his children killed; if he fails to do this, after a given time he will be called upon to pay $3,000, failing to do which will mean that he and his children will be killed. What the demand was to be paid has not been learned.

One of the letters was postmarked "Lancaster," and another was written on the stationery of a bank in Pepperell, Mass.

We are growing faster than ever before and incidentally giving the best values we have ever been able to offer you.

Men's Suits

For several seasons we have been showing you the difference between ordinary factory made, machine sewed clothing and our splendidly constructed, hand-tailored garments. We have gone so far as to copy the most expensive models and reproduce them so faithfully it is almost impossible to tell the original from the copy. $12

There was not so much difficulty in reproducing the styles as there was in crowding the price down so that you would not have to pay any more for our hand-tailored clothes than you would elsewhere for ordinary factory made stuff. But we have done it this year, and we feel proud of the achievement that means so much to the man who wishes to dress well on little money. $15

The latest and most favorite styles of the world's best designers—reliable woolens in patterns you will not find in other shops—hand-tailoring that insures permanency of shape, refinement and grace. # HEARST NOMINATED FOR NEW YORK MAYOR BY ACCLAMATION

THOUSANDS AT CARNEGIE HALL CHEER TICKET

"In Fight to Win and Not to Make a Showing," He Says in Speech of Acceptance.

FORD AND STOKES NAMED

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The scene of unprecedented enthusiasm which preceded and followed the nomination of William Randolph Hearst for Mayor, John Ford for Comptroller and James G. Phelps Stokes for president of the Board of Aldermen at the Municipal League Convention in Carnegie Hall, was strangely in contrast to the weak and tame Tammany convention in the same hall a week or so ago which placed the gas man in nomination.

The names of Hearst, Ford and Stokes were greeted with unanimous applause, and the candidate for Mayor was wildly cheered for fifteen minutes, while the great audience arose to its feet and waved thousands of flags. The band struck up the "Star Spangled Banner," and the crowd joined in the singing of it.

"The only real Democratic convention ever held in New York," was the what one of the speakers called it. And that was not an exaggeration. Those who witnessed the magnificent crowd and felt and were inspired by the unprecedented enthusiasm, indorsed the speaker's words.

14,000 Unable to Enter.

There were still 14,000 persons outside when at 7:45 o'clock the police closed the doors as a matter of safety. Six thousand were crowded in the hall and the police refused to admit another man or woman, delegate or reporter.

Most of them had been there since 7 o'clock.

In the street there were fully 14,000 cheering men and women. Police Captain John W. Daly of the West Forty-seventh street station, who, with Inspector William McLaughlin, was in charge of the police arrangements, telephoned to Police Headquarters for 100 more men to handle the great crowd.

"In all my experience as a policeman," said Captain Daly, "this was the largest and most orderly crowd I ever saw at a convention. Fully 20,000 persons crowded about the hall before the doors opened, clamoring for admission.

"Within the hall there were enacted scenes as loud never before heard in the political history of New York.

"When the name of William Randolph Hearst was placed in nomination for Mayor of the City of New York, the cheering broke forth into a perfect whirlwind and continued for more than fifteen minutes, while a sea of waving flags billowed over the heads of a closely packed mass of people.

Demonstration for Candidate.

Each nominating speech was greeted with profound cheering, but when Mr. Hearst stepped to the front of the platform to accept the nomination the demonstration was the greatest ever seen at a convention in this city. The entire audience rose to its feet, red, white and blue bunting fluttered everywhere and Carnegie Hall shook with tremendous cheers.

Mr. Hearst stood on the edge of the platform waiting for the opportunity to speak.

For fifteen minutes the crowd cheered and cried out the names of the candidates selected, and during this entire time kept in constant motion the great mass of fluttering bits of color they carried.

The speech of Mr. Hearst expounded the principles of the new party into "honesty and efficiency in office."

He declared for prosperity and progress for the city, the public ownership of utilities, to the end that taxes may be reduced, the service improved and the salaries of employes bettered. He denounced the betrayal of the city into the hands of the trust officials, who regarded their license in New York as one of their corporation assets.

He demanded for the country's greatest city this capacity of administration the business needs of the great metropolis and of taking steps to promote the prosperity of an even greater New York.

Mr. Hearst took as the keynote of his speech the declaration:

"However great and prosperous our splendid city is to-day, let us strive to make it greater and more prosperous to-morrow."

Nomination by Acclamation.

It is doubtful if the nomination of any candidate was ever seconded by so many delegates, representing so many sections of the city.

Bernard A. Rosenthal, a former Tammany adherent, in seconding Mr. Hearst's nomination, declared he could not stand for the gas mayor and would henceforth be with the Municipal League.

The nomination was made by acclamation.

BOOM FOR MR. HEARST STARTLES NEW YORK POLITICAL BOSSES

By Publishers' Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Much interest to what promised to be a dull mayoralty campaign has been given by the entrance of William R. Hearst as a candidate on the Municipal Ownership platform.

Small consideration is given in New York as a rule to independent candidates by the party bosses, but the outburst of political enthusiasm last night over the nomination of William R. Hearst, on a straight out and out Municipal Ownership platform gave the political leaders something to think about to-day.

The Hearst boom got under way under auspices that made the conventions of Democrats and Republicans look like incompetents. The crowd stormed Carnegie Hall and after it had packed every inch of room the doors were barred. Fifteen thousand people hung around the doors and clamored for admission. There were several out door meetings to appease the crowd.

The nomination of Mr. Hearst was made in a perfect whirlwind of applause. Altogether the reception given the New York editor surprised even his most ardent admirers, and Tammany Hall politicians were trying to figure just how many votes Mr. Hearst would draw from Mayor McClellan. Republicans admit that there is much in Hearst's candidacy beyond the issue of Municipal Ownership. They figure that every Republican vote drawn from the Republican Mr. Hearst will draw two or even three from the Democrats. Republicans hope that Mr. Hearst will poll such a strong vote that it will kill off Mayor McClellan and make certain the election of William M. Ivins.

SWEDEN NOW FULLY ACCEPTS AGREEMENT

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 13.—Advices from Stockholm state that the Second Chamber of the Swedish Riksdag has unanimously accepted the Karlstad agreement for the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden. A debate will has thus been reached in the negotiations looking to dissolution.

MR. HEARST IN FIGHT TO WIN, HE DECLARES

Prosperity, Progress and Public Ownership His Platform, He Says in Speech of Acceptance.

William Randolph Hearst, in accepting the nomination for Mayor of New York at the convention of the Municipal Ownership League, said:

My Friends—I shall present my principles and purposes to you in a carefully prepared letter of acceptance.

I come forward now to thank you for the confidence you have reposed in me, and to assure you that whether I am elected Mayor or whether I merely retain the resources I now have I shall always endeavor to give you my best service and prove worthy of your indorsement.

I was, as you know, reluctant to enter this contest; but I am no longer reluctant. I am in it now, and in it to win.

I know I speak for all of you when I say we are not here to make a showing, but to win the election.

We are not anxious to win because we are politicians scheming for place, but because we are citizens with principles desirous of seeing those principles put into practical operation for the benefit of our fellow-citizens.

Our principles, briefly summarized, are:

Honesty and efficiency in office.

PROSPERITY and PROGRESS for the people of this city, and

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP of public utilities, to the end that the taxes may be reduced, the service improved, and the conditions of employes bettered.

We want officials elected in whose eyes the welfare of the whole people is more important than the interests of the Gas Trust, the Traction Trust, or any other trust.

We want officials who are capable of understanding the business needs of this mighty city and able to devise proper means to promote the development of an ever Greater New York.

We want prosperity, and we want such progress as will insure additional prosperity.

In our private business, no matter how well we may do one day we try to do better the next, and in public position I believe our motto should be: "No matter how great and prosperous our splendid city may be today, let us try to make it greater and more prosperous to-morrow."

And let the prosperity be not for one, but for many; not for a few, but for all.

Let all legitimate business be welcomed to our city.

Let us not permit conditions to exist under which an enterprise may not locate here because it has to pay more for a Board of Aldermen than it does for its plant and equipment.

Let us not permit conditions under which an enterprise already established here is compelled to withdraw because it cannot compete with the favoritism extended to pet politicians.

Let the city retain its public properties, and develop their wealth and apply their profits to the public benefit. Let the city prove a model employer, giving good hours and good wages—realizing and demonstrating the fact that prosperity as a whole is simply the sum of the prosperity and purchasing power of the individual citizen.

Finally, my friends, I wish to state that I am running for Mayor of this city and not for Governor, or for any other position whatever.

If I have any business ability I shall devote it ALL to the conduct of the business of this city. If I have any other qualities that may be of use I shall devote them ENTIRELY to the service of the people of this city.

I am proud of the friends that will support me. I am proud of the enemies that will oppose me. I am proud of my associates on this ticket, whose names are as famous for honesty and sincerity as they are for ability.

I shall be proud of every vote that you cast for me and I shall cherish it as a badge of honor.

NET DRAWN IN JOHN MITCHELL TRIPLE MURDER TO SPEAK HERE

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 13.—The net is being drawn in around the murderers of Willis C. and Fred R. Olney and little Alice Ingerick, and all the people interested in the tragedy are rapidly being eliminated. Startling developments are momentarily expected.

John Conkling, aged fifty two; his son, Arthur, aged twenty, illiterate peddlers, and Martin Rigler, a well-known farmer, who were taken into custody late last night, are being detained as witnesses, and their statements have untimely cleared up the mystery of the men with the gray horse and the light box wagon which has been most vexing the authorities.

Bert Sigler, a son of Martin Sigler, was to-day brought to police headquarters and his statement is being taken. There is again much excitement in this city to-day, and should any one be arrested charged with the murder, it may go hard with him if he falls into the hands of the crowd.

Mrs. Ingerick still lies in a semi-comatose condition, and it is believed now that she does not know who struck her down.

HENDERSON IS DYING.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Oct. 13.—Ex-Speaker David B. Henderson is very low, and his death may come at any time. Members of his family are constantly at his bedside at the Hotel Julien.

John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers, will speak at the big eight hour demonstration to be held by the Boston Typographical Union in Faneuil Hall, October 23.

Other speakers will be William G. Preston of Toronto, former president of the International Typographical Union; the Rev. Alexander Irvine of New Haven, the Rev. Mr. Mc. Macfarlane of Malden and the Rev. Father Francis W. Maley of St Augustine's Church, South Boston.

President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and President James M. Lynch of the International Typographical Union have made conditional acceptances.

SAYS ATHLETE BROKE GAME LAW

During a crusade for alleged violators of the gunning laws, Captain Joseph Jason, Jr., harbor master of Cohasset, served a summons on Ellery H. Clark, once all-round champion athlete of America, and member of the Boston School Board, for alleged violations of the gunning laws of the State. Captain Jason says Mr. Clark violated the law by using a power boat in gunning.

WHITNEY TO REPLY AT ONCE TO WILLIAMS

Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor to Handle Charges of Legislative Lobbyist.

Henry M. Whitney, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, announced to-day that he would make a detailed answer to the attack of George Fred Williams, who bolted Mr. Whitney "as the leading representative in Massachusetts of the vicious principle of lobbying legislation." Mr. Williams brings detailed charges against Mr. Whitney, declaring at the same time that he is anxious for the success of General Bartlett, who leads the ticket.

"I am now preparing a statement in reply to the Williams outbreak, and I hope to have it ready by to-morrow," Mr. Whitney said to-day when asked about the matter. "I shall attend to Mr. Williams before I do anything else in this campaign."

Mr. Williams says his charges are sustained by a legislative investigation in 1899 which showed:

"First—That to secure a charter for an elevated railway he employed an unprincipled corps of lobbyists, politicians and lawyers, numbering thirty-five to fifty men.

"Second—Among those under retainer were the chairman and secretary of the Democratic State Committee, the chairman of the Republican State Committee, the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee (compensation $10,000), the Democratic candidate for Governor and two ex-Governors.

Wined Legislators.

"Third—That this lobby began work in various counties to influence the nomination and election of members of a legislature before which Mr. Whitney was to present his scheme.

"Fourth—That he gave costly banquets to members of the Legislature at his private club; provided wines and had the lodging bills paid of legislators who were detained in the city after his repasts.

"Fifth—He employed attorneys, including an ex-Governor, to influence by appeal or at the House in the appointment of the committee on street railways.

"Sixth—He expended, according to the finding of the committee of investigation, $33,000 in these ways, while the attorney-general of the State claimed $53,000 to be a low estimate of the expenditures.

Bought Off Opposition.

"Seventh—He bought off the opposition of a competing petitioner by the payment of a large sum of money, the exact amount of which he refused to disclose.

"I will not, by my vote," Williams says, "lower the standards of my public life to the low level which Mr. Whitney adopted as his own before he began his campaign of investigation. I wish it, however, distinctly understood that I shall support, and exceedingly if, in any way, this protest should affect the success of Mr. Bartlett or of the rest of the ticket. Mr. Bartlett's high standing in his profession, his ability, his excellent personal character and his loyal democracy entitle him to the support of the Democrats of the State."

STRUCK BY TROLLEY; DANGEROUSLY HURT

Timothy Sullivan of No. 12 Ramsey street, Dorchester, was struck by an inward-bound Columbia road car at the corner of Hancock street, while on his way to work to-day. He was carried into the entrance on the fender. At the City Hospital he was found to have a fracture at the base of the skull and concussion of the brain. His condition is serious.

15 MONTHS FOR COUNTERFEITER

Samuel Fine, who was arrested with his wife and Daniel Morrison in a house on Bowdoin street, charged with counterfeiting quarters and half dollars, was to-day sentenced to fifteen months on Deer Island and $1 fine by Judge Lowell, in the United States District Court. Morrison, who asked for a trial, was convicted and is now serving a five-year-term in State Prison. The indictment against Mrs. Fine was quashed.

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Troubles by Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent eastern cities by too close attention to business, too little exercise and too many club dinners, finally began to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble; the failure of his digestion brought about a nervous irritability making it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and heart.

In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my former digestion, appetite and vigor. For two years I went from pillar to post, from one sanitarium to another. I gave up smoking, I quit coffee and even renounced my daily glass or two of beer, without any marked improvement.

"Friends had often advised me to try a well known proprietary medicine. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and I had often perused the newspaper advertisements of the remedy but never took any stock in advertised remedies and could believe a fifty-cent patent medicine would touch my case.

"To make a long story short I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally a tablet between meals, when I felt any feeling of nausea or discomfort.

"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep and enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia.

"Out of friendly curiosity I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt diastase and other natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach."

The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate and the nerves from them to receive the nourishment which can only come from food. Stimulants and nerve tonics never give real strength, they are glorious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of food, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and if you can insure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of a safe wholesome remedy such as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, hundreds every day are used in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them and considers them the most popular and successful of any preparation for stomach trouble.

BABY HANDS BIND CLOSER THE GARLANDS

Miracle of Motherhood Figures in Romance of Society Couple.

THEIR LIFE IN CHAPTERS

Again the miracle of motherhood crowns Mrs. James L. Garland, who was Marie Tudor of Brookline, and tiny hands bind more closely those hearts which, after anger and tempestuous scenes in divorce court, were reunited in wedlock. That breach which led to divorce of "Jimmie" Garland and his pretty wife, which was later sealed by a second ceremony of marriage, now seems closed forever in mutual adoration of a new little life.

Mr. and Mrs. Garland were remarried a year ago. Since that time they have been living at a palatial home in East Thirty-First street, New York. There the fifth child, a girl, has just been born, and for all time happiness seems the portion of these two persons whom mere millions and social position could not satisfy. Each was necessary to the other; now more so.

Chapter I.

From the royal house of Tudor pretty Marie Tudor, of Brookline, descended, and there came, too, a royal beauty, some wealth and a social position of the highest. Therefore, when she cast favorable eyes upon James A. Garland, millionaire, club man and society man, the smart set saw and approved.

"An ideal match," was the general comment.

The young people sailed together, drove together, dined together and danced together. At last "Jimmie" Garland asked the all-important question. The answer was "Yes." And congratulations poured in on both from those highest in the social world of this country and Europe.

Then came the day in 1898, at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Brookline. Rev. L. K. Storrs stood within, the chancel rail and beside him stood young Garland. Society there in force from New York, Boston, Newport and the world at large, rustled and twisted for a first glimpse of the bride.

At last she came down the aisle, radiant in her bridal gown, her face flushed softly, and smiled into the eyes of the man who loved her. Then came the usual words, "until death us do part," and Miss Tudor was Mrs. Garland.

Their honeymoon lasted more than a year; they said it should last for always.

When twelve months had passed Mr. and Mrs. Garland returned to America and took up their residence at Chestnut Hill. There they lived in Beverly Farms, and later in Brookline. At Hamilton Mr. Garland's father built an English country mansion, with fifty-two rooms, beautifully illumed magnificent grounds. To newspaper it to the young people, and they took up their residence there. Four babies came to them during the years, all that money could buy and luxury devise was theirs.

Then came the awakening.

Chapter II.

Several years passed, and then the clouds began to gather. There were quarrels and bitter scenes, but for the sake of their children Mr. and Mrs. Garland buried their own differences and faced society's unflinchingly. But Love's first dream was over; and society's ever restless tongue told the story with variations.

Then at last the expected came. It was in 1900 that an open rupture came, and "Jimmie" Garland and his wife separated. There were immediate rumors of a divorce but these were denied by both wife and husband. So also said they had mercifully agreed to disagree. But the wife left the Garland home and went with her children to live at Lincoln, Mass.

For two years they lived apart, and then one day they chanced to meet. They discussed old things and each saw that the light of love still burned in the heart of the other. Then the unexpected happened. One day society awoke to find that "Jimmie" Garland and his wife were reconciled and again occupied their beautiful Hamilton home.

But at that moment, when the smart set was convinced that the Garlands had settled their differences for all time, the unexpected again happened. There came another separation. Then harsh things were said, each to the other, and at last, desperate, Mrs. Garland for the second time left the house of her husband, taking her children with her.

Chapter III.

Soon after this second separation there came suit for divorce which society had expected to follow the first. There was a suit and a counter suit. Mrs. Garland accused "Jimmie" Garland of cruelty and of non-support, and named the actress Edith Kimball, wife of a Yale baseball player.

Against this "Jimmie" Garland named John Dell Danielson and produced in court letters which he declared had been written to his wife by Danielson. For several days the suit went on before Judge DeCourcy of Essex County, and some of the allegations were as sensational as any ever made in a New England divorce court.

On the one hand there were produced witnesses who said, for the wife, that Garland had once declared that he had never loved her; on the other, a vigorous attempt was made to comfort Garland of the charges which Mrs. Garland brought against him. Witnesses swore that they had seen a woman enter his rooms.

Finally the divorce came. It was not unexpected, after the sensational evidence

COLORADO GUNNERS MAKE NEW RECORD

NEWPORT, Oct. 12.—The remarkable success which attended the recent target practice of the new cruiser Colorado is shown in the figures given out today by an officer of the ship.

With the six-inch breech-loading gun, at a range of 3,500 yards, the target being of rectangular canvas, forty shots were fired and forty hits were made, making a percentage of ninety-seven. Ten shots were fired from each of the four eight-inch breech-loading rifles, and but three misses were recorded.

spread in court. The wife again went away with her children, and "Jimmie" Garland returned to the life of a bachelor, apparently for all time.

Chapter IV.

If the surprises in this strange story there were not ended. In the Summer of 1904 "Jimmy" Garland, always fond of theater, was cruising off the New England coast and dropped anchor at Ryan's sport. There is a veil of mystery over what happened there, one which society has never been able to solve.

Certain it is, however, that a stunningly pretty young woman went out to "Jimmy" Garland's yacht in a launch from Wood's Hole. And certain it is that she went aboard the yacht and that nothing further was heard of her. Then it developed that the young woman was Mrs. Garland.

Whether she had gone to the yacht of her own volition, whether she had been invited there, no one knows.

But after awhile smoke poured from the funnels of the yacht, the Ilexmonta, and she headed out. At Newport Mrs. Garland left the yacht, and there one day, with "Jimmie" Garland, she was married before the Rev. W. L. Hood, rector of the Trinity Church.

There again there was a wedding, and together Mr. and Mrs. Garland left the little church as happy as two children. Again they went aboard the yacht and it disappeared on the face of the waters for several weeks. It was a second honeymoon.

Chapter V.

After awhile the Garland's settled again, this time in New York at the East Thirty-first street home. There they have been since, living quietly, and only occasionally appearing in society.

Six months ago it began to be rumored that the stork was to visit the Garland's again, and society listened and was interested. Three months ago it was stated as a positive fact.

Now the stork has come. A dimpled girl baby was the burden. Happy in this little life and their own love the Garlands see only happiness ahead.

UNITARIANS WILL NOT FIGHT BAN OF CHURCHES

"Old-Fashioned Bigotry," Says Dr. Eliot in Barring Out of Delegates.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association, the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale and Ex-Governor John D. Long will make no fight against the refusal of the Executive Committee of the Federation of Churches to admit them as delegates to the national conference in New York next month, according to statement made by the Rev. Lewis G. Wilson of the Unitarian Association to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

The federation has been at work two years arranging for the forthcoming convention, and had succeeded in securing recognition from more than twenty small evangelical denominations. The announced purpose is to show that Protestantism to some degree at least is not divided.

"The action of the executive committee," said Dr. Eliot, who is a son of President Eliot of Harvard, to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "in denying admittance to the Unitarian delegates, seems to be an unfortunate bit of old-fashioned bigotry.

"I had supposed that we had seen the last of that kind of thing in a twentieth century America. I am sorry for it, not because of any personal slight put upon me and my associates, but because I am sincerely interested in the cause of Christian unity; and of course the American people who care about these things are not going to take much stock in an organization which says at the beginning that Edward Everett Hale is not good enough for it.

Members of State Body.

"Such a decision at once turns the enterprise over to just derision. The movement is too good a one to be spoilt by such mismanagement. I am a bit sorry, too, for our colleagues in the Massachusetts and Rhode Island State Federations, who are put in somewhat embarrassing situation by this narrow-minded action of the national committee.

"The Unitarians have their natural place and part in the State federations. Governor Long, W. W. Crapo of New Bedford and I are members of the council of the Massachusetts Federation, and the council has met in my office.

"I understand that we are excluded by the national committee on the ground that we are not Christians. That is a queer old prejudice to come popping up in the year 1905.

"I once asked a very orthodox friend of mine to give me his definition of a Christian. 'My definition of a christian,' he answered, 'is Edward Everett Hale.'

"I am afraid that I think he was nearer right than the members of the committee in New York."

Rev. Lewis G. Wilson, secretary of the Unitarian Association, speaking for that body also, said to the reporter:

Five Points of Faith.

"They exclude the Unitarians on the ground that they are not to be considered followers of Christ. What they really mean by that is that the Unitarians disregard the dogma of the Trinity.

"As a matter of fact, Unitarians have as the fundamental principle upon which their conduct their religious affairs what is called 'the five points of Unitarianism.' These five points, although they are not to be considered in any sense a formal creed, represent the general belief of Unitarians throughout the world. They are as follows:

1—The Fatherhood of God.
2—The Brotherhood of Man.
3—The Leadership of Jesus.
4—Salvation by character.
5—Progress of mankind onward and upward forever.

"The constitution of the national conference of Unitarian churches has in its preamble the following statement:

"These churches accept the religion of Jesus, holding in accordance with his teaching that practical religion is summed up in love to God and love to man.

"These facts will show that Unitarians cannot consistently be excluded from a federation of Christian churches on the ground of not accepting Jesus Christ as their leader and teacher, but only upon the theological dogma of the Trinity, which is discarded by Unitarians and by some other Christian denominations.

COLUMBUS DAY CELEBRATED

Columbus Day, the anniversary of the landing of Columbus on the shores of the new world, was celebrated by the Knights of Columbus with a solemn requiem mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

Rev. James N. Supple, state chaplain, was celebrant of the requiem; Rev. Joseph G. Anderson, of the Knights of Columbus Charity Bureau, deacon; Rev. J. J. O'Donnell, of Abington, subdeacon, and Rev. Thomas J. McCormick, of the Cathedral, master of ceremonies. Archbishop Williams was seated within the sanctuary, attended by Rt. Rev. Arthur J. Teeling, of Lynn, and Rev. Nicolas R. Walsh. Many of the chaplains of the councils in Boston and vicinity were also within the sanctuary.

The music was specially arranged for the occasion by James A. Whelan, organist of the Cathedral, and was rendered by an augmented choir. The soloists were Dr. F. X. Mahoney, Mrs. Christine Gilbraith and M. J. Dwyer.

Rt. Rev. John B. Brodeur, Bishop of Manchester, N. H., and State chaplain of the Knights of Columbus in New Hampshire, preached an eloquent sermon on "Knighthood and the Duty of the Hour."

RATIFY TREATY TO-MORROW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The ratification of the peace treaty between Russia and Japan will take place to-morrow. The treaty will be signed and ratified by the Mikado in Tokio and by the Czar in St. Petersburg simultaneously. Notification of this fact will be communicated by telegraph to the respective governments by the American embassy at St. Petersburg and by the French legation in Tokio.

NOTED WOMAN WORKER DEAD

After years of active life in striving for woman suffrage, leading the women's opposition to Tammany of New York with such success in 1894, heading the women's auxiliary for civil service reform, prominent in the kindergarten movement and a noted charity worker, Mrs. Josephine Shaw Lowell, widow of General Charles Russell Lowell, is dead at her home, No. 43 East Sixty-fourth street, New York city. Her age was sixty-three.

'ELIJAH' FINED $100; CRUELTY

LEWISTON, Me., Oct. 13.—Rev. Frank W. Sandford of the "Holy Ghost and Us" community at Shiloh was to-day fined $100 and costs for cruelty to his son.

The charges of cruelty came against the leader of the Shiloh sect a few days ago, and he was formally arrested shortly after the conclusion of his recent trial. The matter came into court to-day. The court then imposed the fine of $100, there being no sentence to prison.

MAE WOOD SUIT IS DISMISSED

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 13.—The suit of Miss Mae Wood against Senator Platt for $225,000 so far as the garnishment of the United States Express Company's property here is concerned, was disposed of by Judge Day to-day. The court ruled the property does not belong to Platt merely because he is president of the company.

JEWISH FEAST 'SUCCAH' OPEN

The Young Men's Hebrew Association has erected a "succah" or Hebrew tabernacle at its premises, No. 39 East Concord street, to celebrate the impending feast of the Tabernacles, which opens to-night. This "succah" or booth, which commemorates the time when the Israelites lived in tents during their wanderings in the wilderness, is the first one to be put up in this city by a big institution, though they have regularly been constructed by private parties.

This P. M. H. A. "succah" will be opened to-night, which also marks the beginning of the 1905-6 season of the association, composed of bachelors. The first social gathering will be Sunday night, with lectures, social, athletic events coming through the week. On Sunday, October 22, "Simchas Torah," or the feast of the Torah, open house, will be maintained all day by the association.

Mr. Lewis was taken ill in New York last week and returned home on Monday, accompanied by a trained nurse. His condition is said to be very grave.

HENRY M. WHITNEY

RECIPROCITY AND TARIFF REVISION CANDIDATE FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

Henry M. Whitney has had a unique career. He began his business life on a salary of $100 a year. He entered the street railway enterprise by paying $1,000,000 for a tract of land in order to widen a street. He has sold out every dollar's worth of stock in every enterprise he ever established as soon as it was safely afloat. Several of the plans which he has carried out were so far-sighted in their scope that the public, which was to benefit from them, resisted the innovation. He took up the fight for reciprocity with Canada at a time when he had just disposed of every cent's worth of interest he held in any company doing business with Canada. He has never taken part in politics before in his life, and he will stump Massachusetts from one end to the other in order to help put the Commonwealth back where it belongs among the manufacturing States of the country.

If the election of Henry M. Whitney depended on the votes of the old employes of the West End Street Railroad when he was president, there simply would not be any other candidate in the field—he would be elected unanimously. There were six horse railroads in Boston in 1887, all working with a friction that was annoying to the employes and the public alike. The cars were obliged to work long and unreasonable hours for unsatisfactory wages and the public did not get the kind of service it required. Mr. Whitney consolidated all these companies, for public gaging, for it seemed like a gigantic undertaking in those days. The employes were a little uneasy, too, for they did not know what the consolidation purported. Would it mean economy through the lessening of wages and the further increase of hours of labor? Or would it mean a reduction in the forces of the various roads? The employes asked these questions, but nothing detrimental to their welfare happened. Then of a sudden the employes of the various roads became conscious of a new force, a new feeling and personality in the operations of the various lines.

A strange thing had happened—the president of the consolidated roads visited the car stables, chatted freely with the men, joked with them, learned of their troubles if they had any—and most of them had—fixed up their troubles without delay, shortened the hours of labor, reduced the number of trips per man on some of the lines and finally raised the wages of the men from $2 to $2.25 per day on his own volition. This was when electricity was installed.

Then word went round that if any employe had a grievance against the company and he could not settle that grievance, he was free to take the grievance before President Whitney, where he would be received without the red tape and that grievance was settled then and there.

All this was new to the men, and there were not a few of them who were pessimistic about it and said it wouldn't last. But it did last, during the years that Henry M. Whitney was president of the road—it lasted until the men learned to have a regard that was much deeper than respect for their president.

He rode with the drivers on the front platform or the conductors on the rear platform, and chatted freely with them. When he met them on the street he had a cheery smile and a handshake for those with whom he had become acquainted until the whole temper and attitude of the employes of the West End road was changed from indifference to loyalty. Henry M. Whitney put a spirit into the employes of the road which has lasted to this day.

Henry Melville Whitney was born Oct. 22, 1839, at Conway, Franklin county, Mass. His father, the late Gen. James S. Whitney, was an old war horse of democracy in the days before the civil war, though he showed his independence by setting with his vote as a member of the legislature that Charles Sumner should go to the United States Senate.

The father was a Conway merchant, with manufacturing interests. The boy was sent to the Conway schools, and afterward to Williston Seminary. When he was ready to go into business his father had removed to Springfield as superintendent of the armory. Henry found a place as office boy in the Conway bank at $100 a year. The second year he got a 50 per cent increase, and the third year was raised to $300.

"I can't remember," he says, "whether my father ever helped me out with any money besides what I earned or not. I only know I consulted with the cashier of the bank and did some odd jobs for him."

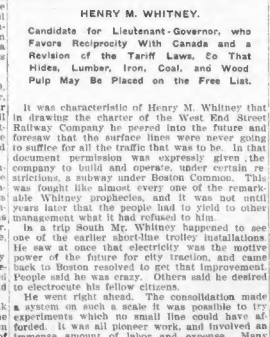
In 1860 he came to Boston and entered the Bank of Redemption as a clerk. Soon afterward he took a place in a naval recruiting office, and when his father was made collector of the port of Boston, he entered the Custom House. The following year he went to New York and set up for himself in the firm of Whitney & Hathaway, conducting a general shipping business.

Meantime General Whitney, the father, had established the Metropolitan Steamship Company. In 1865 the son returned to Boston as agent of this company. The father dying in 1868, the son in 1870 secured control of the company and remained its president until a short time ago, when he sold out all his stock and retired.

His first big improvement for the city of Boston was the Beacon-street boulevard. His father's dwelling was at Beacon and Harvard streets, where Mr. Whitney's mother still resides. Beacon street was a lane. It appealed to Whitney that he man who made that alley into a boulevard, with a street-car line in the middle of it, would not only confer a tremendous blessing on posterity, but incidently make a fortune if he happened to own the adjacent land. He formed the West End Land Co., which raised $1,000,000, bought the land and sent Mr. Whitney into a Brookline town meeting to demonstrate that if he was willing to make the improvement cheap for the town as chief abuttor, nobody else ought to complain. Pretty nearly everybody in sight did complain, but it went through, so far as Brookline was concerned.

The trouble came on the stretch of lane within the Boston limits. The project was resisted in the city, and the Metropolitan street railway, which would lay its tracks on the new boulevard if it went through, made such a fight that Mr. Whitney said: "There's only one way to get rid of these railways; we'll have to buy them all." And he did. The West End Land Company acquired controlling interests in the Metropolitan, the Highland, the Middlesex, the South Boston, and the Cambridge street railways, and consolidated them as the West End street railway.

The Beacon street boulevard was finally laid out, and Boston had the basis of the most magnificent parkway system in the world.



HENRY M. WHITNEY.

Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, who Favors Reciprocity With Canada and a Revision of the Tariff Laws, So That Hides, Lumber, Iron, Coal, and Wood Pulp May Be Placed on the Free List.

It was characteristic of Henry M. Whitney that in drawing the charter of the West End Street Railway Company he peered into the future and foresaw that the surface lines were never going to suffice for all the traffic that was to be. In that document permission was expressly given the company to build and operate, under certain restrictions, a subway under Boston Common. There was fought like almost every one of the remarkable Whitney prophecies, and it was not until years later that the people had to yield to other management what it had refused to him.

In a trip South Mr. Whitney happened to see one of the earlier short-line trolley installations. He saw at once that electricity was the motive power of the future for city traction, and came back to Boston resolved to get that improvement. People said he was crazy. Others said he desired to electrocute his fellow citizens.

He went right ahead. The consolidation made a system on such a scale it was possible to try experiments which no small line could have afforded. It was all pioneer work, and involved an immense amount of labor and expense. Many cities sent agents to see what Whitney was up to.

The next great Whitney enterprise was the coal business in Canada. He organized the Dominion Coal Company, which combined a large number of mines on Cape Breton Island. The product was sold for manufacturing purposes chiefly along the St. Lawrence River. In the winter that river is frozen, and the men had no work. Mr. Whitney conceived the idea of giving the men work the year round and hauling International trade besides, by selling coal in Boston. A fleet of colliers was chartered, and coal carried to this port. It developed that the kind of coal mined at Sidney was more profitably refined on the spot, leaving a marketable coke; so Mr. Whitney went to the Legislature for a charter for what are now known as the New England Gas & Coke Company, and the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company, to sell gas to the district gas companies of Boston and coke to the public. Here again he was bitterly opposed. Before the Dominion Company was organized the product was 800,000 tons. Now it is 3,500,000.

The next commercial company was the Submarine Signal, which makes and sells appliances based on an invention of Elisha Gray. When attached to vessels at sea the signals record the approach of passing vessels or nearby obstructions, and prevent collisions. Mr. Whitney retired from this company.

Still another enterprise which has been set down to his credit as a pure work of philanthropy, but which he grinned was nothing but straight business, was the transaction by which the Boston Chamber of Commerce acquired without paying for it the fine building which its building stands. The land belonged originally to the old Bay Company, the India, and the Central. The India wharf people desired to deed over their half for nothing expecting to get back the value with interest from sales of adjacent land. The Central Wharf Company refused to do likewise. Mr. Whitney came forward, bought the whole property and gave the Chamber its site.

Hotel Beaconsfield, Brookline, is another of his enterprises. The only other commercial concern with which he is now connected is the American Asbestos Company.

In the course of his dealings in Canada Mr. Whitney had occasion to make many acquaintances among the business men of the country, and became impressed both with their fine qualities as associates and with the unparalleled resources of their new land of promise. When he had disposed of his interest in the Dominion Coal Company he took the time to renew earlier studies of the trade relations between the two peoples, and became thoroughly imbued with the idea that in Canada lies the opportunity for New England to regain all that great financial prestige which was formerly hers in building the railways and cities of the West.

"The artificial wall, the tariff, which obstructs trade, ought to come down," he says. He let it be known to his friends that he stood ready to give of his time and means to help that fight.

The President of the Chamber of Commerce, which has been doing things to further reciprocity for many years, about this time resigning, Mr. Whitney was chosen his successor.

He immediately decided that the way to get a new tariff law was to notify the law makers through the ballot box that the people of Massachusetts wanted it. Since then he has been making a continuous fight on that line.

Mr. Whitney's family life has been peculiarly happy. The son of a mother who at 85 finds her son one of the most distinguished citizens of the State, he married in 1869 Miss Green, daughter of Admiral Joseph R. Green of Brookline, and has been blessed with five children, Miss Ruth, Mrs. J. J. Gardiner, Miss Laura, James S., now a Harvard sophomore, and Miss Josephine.

The Whitneys live in Brookline, with a summer home at Cohasset, where the candidate for Lieutenant-Governor has a small but fine stud of riding and driving horses. They never race or exhibits. He is fond of riding and indulges in that sport much of the time.

He is president of the Cohasset Golf Club, but this is not to be taken seriously. He has never held a stick in his hand. His usual means of propulsion about the city is an automobile. He has only been to Europe once.

He is a member of the Algonquin, Boston Art and Country clubs.

He has friends wherever he has had dealings, from the older employes of the street railway system, who speak of him with great respect and esteem, to the business men with whom he is popular by reason of his urbanity, good fellowship and genius for making the other man feel that he is interested in him.

Henry M. Whitney is the man of the hour. He is not in politics because he desires to fill public office. He is a clear-headed, earnest advocate of methods and measures calculated to retain and promote the industrial welfare of New England. He represents that great business interest—New England men who prefer to fight for the rights of New England rather than transfer their capital and their energy to more favored sections of our country.

In him is typified the earnest desire of 60,000 Republican voters of this Commonwealth for reciprocity with Canada and other nations. He will unquestionably receive the support of this class of voters at the polls in November, and his election would be the most effectual notice that could be served on the Congress that the business men of Massachusetts demand prompt relief from the burdensome schedules of the tariff law.

A vote for Henry M. Whitney is a vote for the preservation of our industries—a vote to give more work and better pay to our wage earners—a vote of disapproval for those leaders of the opposition who are willing to sacrifice the industrial welfare of New England for what they conceive to be their duty to a political party.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

A Story of Stirring Adventure, Afloat and Ashore, of a Brave Boy

By CAPTAIN RICHARD RUDD, Author of "WHO KILLED GERALD BROWN?"

WHEN Jack Harkaway heard that Hunston was in Havana, instead of speeding to Japan in his yacht, the Hawk, his eagerness to capture his old enemy overstepped his caution. He did not know that the apparently disinterested information brought him by a Havana policeman was in reality a deep laid plot by which Hunston hoped to remove Jack from his path once and for all.

CHAPTER X.

A Cry in the Dark

WHILE Jack, Harvey and Steel were racing through the streets of Havana events had moved much to them were happening in two places.

On board the yacht Mabel Tony, who had been left in charge, was walking the deck, wondering how long it would be before he got a chance to go ashore.

As he looked out over the bay he presently saw something dark on the water.

A closer inspection showed him that it was a boat approaching very quietly.

The oars were muffled, and only the light splash of the water as they were gently dipped could be heard above the ripple of the water at the yacht's bow.

Tony leaned over the rail and watched.

As the boat drew near a man standing in her bows shaded his eyes with his hands and studied the yacht.

Tony, being possessed of a sudden intuition that this meant no good, drew back behind a coil of rope, so that he could observe the rowboat without being himself seen.

There were two passengers in the boat.

One was the man in the bow, a short, well-knit fellow.

The other, at the oars, was hard to make out, but Tony discovered presently, to his surprise, that it was a woman.

The boat was now within a cable's length.

Tony watched and waited.

Presently a hail came out of the darkness.

"Mr. Harkaway!"

Tony at once went to the rail and answered it.

"A message for Mr. Harkaway," said the man in the bow.

A Warning

"All right," said Tony. "Let's have it."

The man stood in the bow of the boat and passed up a slip of paper.

Tony took it, and instantly the woman who was rowing pulled away.

Hardly had the boat got out of the shadow of the yacht than another, a long, low craft, rowed by four men, bore down on it.

Tony watched intently.

From the first boat came a scream of terror, just one short, shrill cry, that was suddenly cut off as if someone had clapped a hand over the mouth of the woman who had uttered it.

Tony saw the men on board the second boat reach out and seize the woman and man, and, pulling them into their own boat, row rapidly away.

He was powerless to help.

He might have taken a shot or two at the boat with his rifle, but he could not know at whom he was firing, and ran the risk of wounding a friend as well as a foe.

When he had made up his mind to man a boat of his own and give chase the craft had vanished in the darkness, while the boat which had borne the messengers to the Mabel drifted keet up down the tide.

Tony now remembered that he had not read the message that had been given him.

Walking over to where a light shone out of a stateroom window, he held the paper in the glow and with difficulty spelled it out, for he was hardly a master of English.

"Father is here. He has laid a trap for you, and a policeman will try to lure you to it. Don't go or you will be killed. I have escaped to deliver this, and they do not know that I shall be overtaken and brought back. I am praying that I shall be able to deliver it before they capture me.

Tony read the note over twice or three times before he fully understood its meaning.

Then it burst upon him, clear as daylight.

Mabel Hunston had written the note in the hope to save Jack, not knowing his yacht was in the harbor, had brought it there.

The fact that she had rowed the boat Tony explained by the laziness of the Havana boatmen.

The girl had probably engaged some loafer, who had agreed to allow her to use his boat, but refused to row. Mabel had evidently gone along to see that it was rowed.

Tony chuckled when he thought how the fellow was regaled for his laziness, but when he thought of the girl in the hands of the ruffians who had overtaken her he grew serious. They might be Hunston's men, and in that case they would do nothing but return the girl to the prison in which her father kept her.

But again they might be harbor pirates, and Tony shuddered to think of the girl held for ransom in such a school as that.

At all events, there was but one thing to do, and that was to follow as speedily as possible.

He knew the general direction in which the boat had gone. Arousing three sailors whom he knew he could trust, he dropped the yacht's naphtha launch from the davits and set forth toward the shore.

He had not gone more than half a mile when he heard first the noise of oars, and then a rowboat grating on the beach.

Tracked Home

With a turn of the wheel he increased the speed of his boat till the white line of foam showed him where the waves were breaking on the sand.

The boat glided half her length on the shore, and Tony sprang out just in time to see a number of figures vanishing in the darkness.

He left with him only one man, leaving the others to guard the launch.

Then he started cautiously way after the figures, keeping a safe distance away so as to avoid detection.

Through long, narrow streets, around sudden corners and lute alleys they turned. Once or twice they almost lost their quarry in the darkness, but each time were rewarded in renewed speed.

Finally a door opened in a shack a half block ahead, and the party disappeared through it.

Tony and the sailor ran up, and, without thinking of the consequences of their daring, burst loudly on the door.

There was a noise of scrambling inside.

A door in the rear was opened and slammed, and Tony could hear feet scurrying down some back path.

But he had little time to concern himself with these, for suddenly he was confronted with a gigantic negro, who, with a wicked looking sword in the air, as he charged directly at the two outside.

TO THE BOY READERS OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN:

TO-DAY I want to call to your attention a remark made by Benjamin Franklin, who said: "Want of care does us more harm than want of knowledge."

Never forget that his words are true. Always do as well as you know how and you'll come out all right. It's not doing what you know you ought to do that's likely to make you trouble. So learn all you can and take all the care you can, whether at your play or at your work, and you will get on well.

GAS NUISANCE ANGERS CHELSEA

Mayor Willard of Chelsea has petitioned the State Board of Health for the abatement of the Everett Coke Works nuisance. He has sent the following letter to Dr. Henry P. Walcott, chairman of the State Board of Health:

"I write to inform you that during the period from Tuesday evening to early Friday morning of last week the odor from the New England Gas and Coke Works located in Everett spread over a large portion of this city. The fumes were so strong as to be almost unbearable. We receive it in a double-distilled form; so strong, in fact, as to cause cases of nausea.

"Your board has pronounced it a nuisance. Several months have elapsed since the petitioners against this nuisance were heard, and we have waited patiently a very reasonable length of time for relief. We ask now for some assurance from you that this nuisance will cease at some early date definitely stated. We believe that ample time has been given the corporation to make such experiments as are necessary to do away with this odor. Unless we can get relief it will be necessary for us to apply to the courts and ask that the nuisance be restrained."

FIND WOODS BOY, MIXED HIS NAME

Little James Woods, son of Joseph Woods, No. 102 Moore street, Cambridge, got lost on his way to Sunday School and because he thought his name was Timber narrowly escaped not being found. At first he thought his name was Forrest, then he thought it might be Groves, but finally concluded that it was Timber, every thing all three names meant the same to him.

The little fellow wandered around for two days and nights, sleeping in doorways and without a bite to eat. Friday night he found himself in Haymarket square, and being very tired and hungry he went to the Relief hospital. The authorities sought to find his father under the name of Timber and being unsuccessful finally sent him to Tewksbury. There officials who had seen accounts of the boy's mysterious disappearance in the newspapers sent word to Mr. Woods in Cambridge and he identified his son.

AUTHOR CABLE'S DAUGHTER WEDS

NORTHAMPTON, Oct. 13.—In St. John's Episcopal Church Miss Margaret Bartlett Cable, daughter of George W. Cable, the novelist, was married to the Rev. Harold Wyer Brewster, curate of Christ Episcopal Church, Fitchburg. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lyman P. Lovell, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Alexis W. Stein, rector of the Fitchburg Episcopal Church. The bride was given away by her father, whose sixtieth birthday it was.

The maid of honor was Miss Bertha Macomber of this city, and the bridesmaids were Miss Isabel Cable and Miss Dorothea Cable, sisters of the bride, and Miss Helen Brewster, sister of the groom. John Francis White of Cambridge was best man.

Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Mrs. J. W. Lang and Mrs. S. Frake

Of all the diseases known, with which women are afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so-called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing down pains, urine too frequent, scanty or high colored, producing scalding or burning, or deposits like brick dust in it; unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back running down the inside of her groin, she may be sure her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The following letters show how marvelously successful it is.

Mrs. Samuel Frake, of Prospect Plains, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I cannot thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I first wrote to you I had suffered for years with what the doctor called kidney trouble and congestion of the womb. My back ached dreadfully all the time, and I suffered so with that bearing-down feeling I could hardly walk across the room. I did not get any better, so decided to stop doctoring with my physician and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am thankful to say it has entirely cured me. I do all my own work, have no more backache and all the bad symptoms have disappeared.

I cannot praise your medicine enough, and would advise all women suffering with kidney trouble to try it.

Mrs. J. W. Lang, of 626 Third Avenue, New York, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I have been a great sufferer with kidney trouble. My back ached all the time and I was discouraged. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure kidney disease, and I began to take it and it has cured me when everything else had failed. I have recommended it to lots of people and they all praise it very highly.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from kidney trouble, or any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of the great volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than likely she has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

SUBURBAN TOWNS FORM OWNERSHIP LEAGUE CLUBS

Interest Shown in Every Part of Greater Boston Guarantees Success.

Municipal ownership clubs are being formed in the towns and cities outside of Boston, but in the metropolitan district. In Cambridge the feeling for municipal ownership is very strong. The secretary of the league has received many applications from the classic city for membership in the non-partisan league.

Here are some of the Cambridge members: Edwin C. Dow, of No. 132 Austin street; Augustus Seaver, of No. 175 Elm street; A. M. and A. L. Richards, of No. 22 Hooper street; Edward L. McManus, of No. 53 Prescott street; Herbert L. Miller, of No. 529 Massachusetts avenue; James J. Greeley, of No. 7 Dana street; Thomas A. Glennon, of No. 167 Brookline street; James J. Gately, of No. 6 Cambridge street, and Arthur W. Darley, of No. 157 Franklin street.

Augustus Seaver of Cambridge in a letter to the secretary of the Municipal Ownership League, says:

Will Produce System.

"It is with pleasure that I watch the spread of the doctrine of municipal ownership as reported through the columns of the AMERICAN. System and co-operation are pets of mine. Municipal ownership as an ideal for both attracted me at once. Municipal ownership problems in itself co-operation and co-operation presupposes.

"Where many rule a system is not so readily worked up. Municipal ownership, its rules, ordained by law. The people many times unconcerned in obtaining what they demand. Still, by the co-operation of sufficient numbers anything may be obtained from our representatives, the law makers and system makers.

"I do not believe that the citizens of Boston today show a truly systematic and co-operative spirit, but I do not attribute this to lack of willingness. The great majority, without doubt, will welcome co-operative methods when they are based on the right lines. Co-operation is, however, an end, to my mind, and what we need is the means.

"I wish to place myself on record as believing that the Municipal Ownership League, inheriting certain definite principles, may claim rightfully to exemplify co-operation, and is the result of a ready solution of the need of a means."

Suburban Clubs Forming.

John Gardner of No. 10 Nott street, Malden, has formed a Municipal Ownership club. It is in a flourishing condition and is growing in size rapidly. Here are some of the members: H. Foley, E. B. Hill, J. A. Cosgrove, W. Mutz, Noal Washburn, H. Granacie, F. T. Clancy, D. Hart, J. Warren, J. Sweeney, M. J. O'Connor and John Lynch.

Leon Beaudett of No. 81 Central avenue, Medford, is joining the League, writes:

"I have been looking for an opportunity to join a Municipal Ownership League for some time, and now that you have opened upon whom you can figure for a vote to help the people get their rights. I do not think you will find that there are many (and I do not say any) who will oppose you."

George H. Eastman of Newtonville indorses the principles enunciated by the AMERICAN and adds: "I am in full accord to those words, and believe that the principles stated in the earnest editorials will be the means necessary to the continued success of our whole country."

Some of the members of other places are: R. Bottger, Hyde Park; Thomas H. Bromley of Beverly, Jason N. Whitcomb and John Dickson of Quincy, Antine and Wesley Beaulieu of Quincy.

NEWS OF LABOR.

Richard Puelle of St. Louis, Mo., a general organizer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, has arrived in this city to carry on a three months' organizing campaign. He addressed a meeting of the local Carpenters' District Council last night, and gave a glowing account of the progress of the organization throughout the country. Mr. Puelle, who is considered one of the ablest organizers in his field, comes to Boston with a record of having just gathered 150 carpenters into the organization in South Chicago.

It was reported that there was hardly any trouble to speak of now in regard to the inauguration of the new wage decrease. The treasurer's report showed a healthy financial condition. The council is making arrangements to move soon from its present headquarters, No. 1071 Washington street to a hall in the neighborhood of Scollay square. The change is made on account of the noise of the Elevated trains.

BOILERMAKERS INITIATE.

Four candidates from Brockton and Lynn were obligated in preparation for the Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders' Union, which will be opened for business at No. 724 Washington street. They were admitted by Business Agent Allen T. Brown of Lynn and Business Agent Joseph Clark of Brockton.

An address was given to a representative of Boston Typographical Union, who requested the co-operation of the members in the efforts which are being made to increase the efficiency of the apprentices for book and job printers January 1. An invitation was also extended to the members to attend the big eight-hour demonstration to be held by the Boston unions on October 23 in Faneuil Hall. Local No. 251 now meets on the second and fourth Thursdays at Naomi Hall No. 724 Washington street.

WANT $1 GAS FOR SALEM.

An agitation for $1 gas has been started in Salem by the Central Labor Union and that city. The following petition has been sent out to the directors of the Salem Light Company by the legislative committee of the Central Labor Union:

"We, the citizens of the city of Salem, in behalf of organized labor of this city, respectfully request your company for a reduction in the price of gas to the popular price of $1 per 1,000 cubic feet.

"We are aware that other cities are enjoying gas at a lower price and the companies have no better facilities for manufacturing the product, and we believe that Boston and suburbs, Lynn and Lowell, not even an Hopkinton and Lawrence, are going

PLANK WILL FACE THE GIANTS

Pitcher Mathewson

TELLS STORY OF

How Giants Won.

BY CHRISTY MATHEWSON

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—We won the third game so easily that there is little to dwell upon in my mind that we will walk off with the series.

As for myself, I never felt better in my life. I had full control of the various balls, and found it comparatively easy to puzzle the opposing batters. They got a few hits, but this did not disturb me. I felt always that I was in control of the situation, so far as the pitching was concerned. I felt confident that the game was ours from the very start.

Every athlete knows when he is just right to do his best shortly after a contest begins, and as soon as he realizes this fully the task becomes easy. The plate loomed up big for me, and it seemed a simple task to put the balls over right.

But the public must remember that it takes other things besides good pitching to win a game. A team must be good in the hitting and fielding departments,and this we were yesterday. I don't think the Giants ever played in such perfect harmony since I have been a member of the team. We all seemed to be able to connect with the ball. We had our eyes in good shape in that third game, and I think we would have found Bender for a few good hits, even if he pitched as well as he did in the second game of the series.

For this reason the fans were only too willing to turn out to show their appreciation and help the cause along.

As if in league with the Giants and their determination to nail the bunting the weather man offered his very best and choicest elements for the occasion and there was just enough briskness in the air to make the fans' blood tingle and susceptable to the heated argument that was on the card.

Keyed to the highest tension the players showed physical signs of the terrific grueling that they have been through yet there was not the least appearance of weakening in the camp of either foe as they girded themselves for the mortal combat, the first of the brace that are to be played in this city.

Tried and true, Joe McGinity, the "iron man" was called to by the Giants to lead the charge and put the Quakers to rout.

Plank for the Quarters.

To train the guns on the Giants, the Quaker captain selected Eddie Plank, the clever southpaw, who had tasted defeat once at the hands of his opponents but was willing to test his offside delivery again against the same batters.

The Athletics, through the liberality of President Shibe and Manager Connie Mack will get their extra share of all games played, and consequently if they lose the Quakers players' share will be as much, if not more than the Giants' share of the latter win—that is, it would be if the plan of the commission was carried through, but President Brush and Manager McGraw have a surprise in store for the Giants, which without doubt will level up the financial question in a most satisfactory way to the home players.

Players' Share of Receipts.

At this place it might be just as well to give the amount of the players' share of the first three games, according to the commission's plan. The total gate receipts so far have been $40,072. Of this the players are entitled to $21,631.92, after the ten per cent. for the commission and the clubs' thirty per cent. is taken out. According to agreement, the winning team is to get sixty-five per cent. and the losers twenty-five per cent. of the players' end. About thirty-six players, eighteen in each club, will share in the pot, consequently up to date there is coming to each player of the prospective winning team $801.33, and to each of the losers $300.49.

To-day's receipts should swell the total of the winners to about $1,400 per man, and the losers to over $500 per, consequently it can easily be appreciated the Giants have a valuable financial inducement at stake to win as well as the honor, glory and prestige that will attach to the victors. The winning players share will be a nice, tidy little piece of change.

And perhaps the big share is not the Giant's, too, if they play the game they did yesterday. Luck and bunts of it is the only possible thing that can put the Athletics in a position to get a look in.

Athletics Won't Win Again.

My personal opinion is, judging from yesterday's superb exhibition by the home team, that the Athletics will not win another game. And I should be pleased enough if the series could wind up four games to three in the Giants' favor for that would put a more even flavor to the match race, and everybody would be satisfied except the most rabid of partisans, who desire one or the other team to be beaten out of sight. But those unreasonable people are enemies to baseball, which they profess to love so well. An even race would have the tendency to allay or respect for the abilities of both teams, which it is little less than a sin to detract, for both are good.

COLLINS'S MEN MAY LAND TITLE TO-DAY

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, for the title of "Champions of Boston," Boston, Oct. 13.—Desperate were the Pennants when they came out on the field this afternoon for the fifth game of the local interclub series between the American and National League teams, and, as Captain Fred stated, they were going to win by hook or crook this afternoon.

A win to-day for the Walpole street lads would keep them still in the running while, if they should lose, the excitement would be rewarded with that title, as, according to the agreement, the team to win four games would land the honor. The Cyclamps had already taken three out of four games.

The Collins crew, however, were confident of winning to-day's battle. They claims that the victory the Tennesseeans scored on Monday, the opening day, was a fluke, and that they couldn't win another if they played forever.

Norwood Gibson and Vic Willis were slated to do the twirling stunt, and both warmed up in exceptionally fine style.

To-morrow the season will wind up with a double-header.

BARGAIN DAY TO-MORROW

There will be a double-header between the Boston Americans and the Boston Nationals tomorrow, the start of the first game being at 1:45 o'clock.

This will wind up the series of seven games. It was originally intended to play the last game on Monday, but the management thought a double-header on Saturday would work better all around as the weather at this season of the year is not to be depended upon, and a storm might spoil a fine one.

Up to to-day's game the Americans have won four games and the Cyclamps need one more game to capture the series.

HARVARD OPPOSED TO PAUL DASHIELL

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 13.—Yale, Harvard and Princeton will have to make some changes from the historic list of the officials for their annual football games because of protests by Princeton and Harvard against some of the old-timers.

Princeton has taken exception to the reappointment of Paul Dashiell, who has umpired the Yale-Harvard game for many years. Another umpire will have to be chosen. Princeton has also protested against the reappointment of Matthew A. McClung, referee at the annual game for years, so that a complete new set must be chosen.

Harvard has also demanded that Dashiell be not appointed for the Yale-Harvard game, but will stand for McClung. Yale would be glad to have the old set of experienced veterans reappointed and especially in view of the fact that so much of the reforms are requested by President Roosevelt depends on the selection of experienced officials. Both McClung and Dashiell have penalized Princeton heavily in the past.

WARREN BEAT HOLMES.

Warren was the victor over Holmes in the fourth match of the New England Class B amateur tournament at the Hub Billiard Palace by the score of 200 to 149. Warren's playing was the best of the tourney to date, making many fine shots.

ARMIES OF YOUNGSTERS SEE BALL GAMES FREE

"Hully gee. Did ye take notice of that, swat! Arrah fer Hobee Ferrie," screamed an urchin, with his face plastered against a lower portion of a twenty-foot fence up on Huntington avenue, the other afternoon.

There was no apparent reason to the uninitated why this bit of young Americs should be talking to the wooden barrier, until a closer inspection of his wild outbursts was investigated.

It was the American baseball grounds and the diamond sport which the wearer of knickerbockers worship was the magnet that accounted for his face being pressed to the fence, where a tiny crack furnished him his observations, gratis.

From all sections of the city and suburbs they come, as distance has no terrors for the juvenile fans, when in quest of a peep of their favorites in spangles.

A Regular Contingent.

There is a regular contingent of youthful experts who have followed the ups and downs of the Champs the whole season long and are regular in the attendance of the clock in their daddy visitations to the big park and they have their system all picked out and woe to the ignorant fan rooter who happens to be featured in the particular property of one of the "regulars" when the enemy hoves in view, as there is warfare outbreak and many are the impromptu battles that are quickly begun and as quickly ended on account of the ruling power and accepted as deciding all wrangles of more than by the arbitrary method which hardly appeals to the youthful sense. The exception exists in the case of the weaker and smaller lots who are generally upheld by some worthy ally if he is beset by some fractious "batting In" element, when the combination works to the routing of the aforesaid belligerent.

The bugbear of the youngsters is the copper who has charge of that outer area of the grounds to protect against trespassers who would try to scale the fence if the arm of the law was not in evidence.

There is a general bundling for protection against the guardian of the peace and the trip is quickly given if the cop is seen approaching in the vicinity and a general scampering for refuge ground of vantage is momentarily taken till he disappears at the big park.

"Cos dat guy is centre field?" queries one member of the fraternity, as he keeps one eye at the loophole and switches the other toward his nearest neighbor for information. "But ain't no Chick Stahl. I know Chick, but that gink ain't in the same class.

"Some up, Kibbins, Dat's the new player which de Mericans are trying out, but he can't touch Chick."

"Cheese it, the Cop!"

"Cheese it, the cop!" comes down the line, and further discussion comes to an abrupt cessation, while the disturbed watchers wander about nonchalantly so if they were the innocent injured, though they are inwardly helping the huge bluecoat on his way to pass the coveted spot.

But the stern copper is usually of the good-natured type, who dislikes to deprive the boys of their little enjoyment, and he is not too exacting in doing his duty on this beat, as there is no immediate call for it.

It is wonderful how the fence has been constructed by Dar Ittle crevices wide enough for the use of a single eye and oftentimes when there is a pick there is a sharing of the precious sight among questers.

Last year a more enterprising youngster conceived the idea that by knocking under the fence he could gain admission to the grounds, which was better than a far away peek.

He accomplished his purpose with the help of several pocket knives and then was steadily striving of humanity coming out of the earth on the inside till the scamper were apprehended and the hole plugged up.

"What you're doing, Gimpy?" was hurled by one ragged decipie of the National game to a wooden legged owner of one of the openings in the fence, who was busy cutting some hieroglyphics on paper every few minutes. "Keeping de score, you chump." was fired back, and without taking his attention off his labor. And it is a fact that some of the active members of the outside brigade take tabs on the progress of the game and they become very important if the games are close and the standing is somewhat in doubt.

There will be a double-header between the Boston Americans and the Boston Nationals tomorrow, the start of the first game being at 1:45 o'clock.

This will wind up the series of seven games. It was originally intended to play the last game on Monday, but the management thought a double-header on Saturday would work better all around as the weather at this season of the year is not to be depended upon, and a storm might spoil a fine one.

TRAINED ON CIGARETTES AND BEER

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—John W. Morton, England's best sprinter, who is now competing in America, won the special sixty-yard dash held at Madison Square Garden last night in connection with the physical culture show.

When the Englishman barely won from Lawson Robertson of the Irish-American A. C. in his heat in 6 2-5 seconds, and after Arthur Johnston of the New York Athletic Club, had taken first place in his heat in the same time, the spectators considered the chances of the Americans bright indeed.

A few minutes after his victory those lining the track were surprised to see him amble across the track smoking a cigarette. When asked how he explained the fact that he was in such good condition, despite the fact that he smoked, he laughingly answered: "Oh, I train on cigarettes and beer." As a matter of fact, there is more truth than fiction in his statement, inasmuch as he smokes the liveliest day and drinks beer whenever he feels like it.

THREE NEW MEN OUT AT HARVARD

No man has the muscle and speed and is a member of Harvard University and eligible for the Crimson eleven can sit in the grandstands and watch the Harvard eleven play its gridiron contests this fall.

Reid wants every man in Harvard out trying to put Harvard football on top again. He said so in public at the mass meeting held in the Harvard Union last Tuesday night when that big hall was thronged by cheering, singing Harvard men. He not only said this, but he named some of the fellows whom he knew he wanted to get out, but who had not reported. These vigorous methods had effect, for yesterday afternoon there were three new men out for the Crimson team who had been caught in the net of Reid's contagious enthusiasm and had responded.

Don Nichols Out For Team.

Don Nichols, the star half back on the Crimson eleven two years ago and substitute to Dick Sperry last year, was out for the first time this year. He had intended to come out before, but an injury that he received last year still bothered him and it was thought best that he should not come out. Reid's emergency call got him. There were also out for the first time Henry Whitman, sub end last year, and Preston Davis, sub tackle last fall, who broke his collar bone in the Holy Cross game. Whitman is a tall, rangey fellow and a very fast runner. He will be worked as an end again. Davis will be tried at full back.

Some of the regular varsity players were in the scrimmage in the practice. The second team and an eleven of varsity substitutes had a short scrimmage in which the second eleven had all the better of the argument. They scored a touchdown on a blocked kick, while the varsity men failed to cross the second goal, though they twice had the ball on the second's ten-yard line, where they lost it. Hanley got into the game again after an absence of a week.

Cavanee Breaks Collarbone.

"Scotty" McMaster's tackling dummy, rigged up on the Soldiers' Field practice gridiron, objected to the abusive treatment from Harvard's football warriors, and resolutely refused to be broken the collarbone of Clarke Montgomery Cavanee, a second-year law school man and one of the leading candidates for a tackle berth on the varsity eleven. It is the first time the "dummy" has injured a player since it was rigged, seven years ago.

The miserable attempts by Harvard to down the Bates runners yesterday forced Reid to give the varsity candidates a stiff dose on the tackling "dummy" from all angles, and it was during this practice that Cavanee met with the injury. The bone was broken clean, and it is now thought that Cavanee will be put out of the game for the rest of the season. Reid considered the law school man a splendid candidate on account of his weight and speed, and had him booked for a position on the varsity.

TOMMY RYAN WILL MANAGE MARVIN HART

Special to the Boston American.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 13.—By wire Martin Hart closed a deal with Tommy Ryan, whereby Ryan becomes the trainer-manager of the Louisville boy for at least a year, and as much longer as the two think will be profitable. Ryan is ordered to report here immediately. The two will work together for a few weeks and then tour the country, offering to take in some good money and to meet such would-be champions as may come to the front.

With the hiring of Ryan comes the discharge of Jack Slattery, for two years Hart's trainer. Hart said he hated to do it, but he felt that Mac could not give him the scientific training necessary to the successful pugilist.

PILGRIM KICKERS ARRIVE IN HUB

The famous Pilgrim Association football team, composed of some of the most expert "Soccer" players in all England, arrived in this city last night and went immediately to the Copley Square Hotel. In the party were thirteen players, including Sir Charles Kirkpatrick, Captain F. H. Milnes and Manager C. H. Living stone. Lady Kirkpatrick is accompanying her husband.

HOW CAN WOMEN BE ANGELS IF ANGELS CAN NEVER BE WOMEN?

Is Church Decision a Direct Blow at Womankind?

By Eleanor Ames

WHEN is a lady not a lady?" worldly people who seem never to see the serious side of life are asking each other these days, and in return comes the answer, "When she is an angel."

For a telling blow has been struck at womankind. It has been decided that no woman ever was or ever will be an angel.

Beautiful, sweet, kind, gentle, good, possessed of all the virtues, she may be; an example and an inspiration to all mankind, but an angel—never.

The sex of angels, and the denial that there were ever any angels feminine, has aroused the world recently and has proved a ripe subject for discussion.

Ecclesiastical opinion declares that all angels are men—or, if not men, they certainly have the masculine re-model them upon masculine lines, destroyed them utterly and cast them away forever.

The discussion arose over the forty angels which J. Ganteon Mother-Borglum has made for the Belmont Memorial Chapel in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights, New York.

A visiting clergyman saw the angels and declared that they were Scripturally incorrect. Angels were never feminine, he declared, save in secular circles.

"Beauty of countenance and chastity of pose and wings do not necessarily make an angel," is the way he expressed it.

Mr. Borglum argued to the contrary.

In his eyes these angels were as near perfection as he could make them. He had put six months of his best efforts into making them so.

The Rev. Dr. John P. Peters heard about it, and he agreed with the clergyman who made the discovery. He said that all the angels he could think of as mentioned in the Bible had men's names.

It was the Angel of the Annunciation which finally brought matters to a crisis. Mr. Borglum had made this angel a lovely Madonna-like creation, in which sweetness and seriousness combined to make a feminine face of rarest beauty.

Dr. Peters declared that the New Testament laid special stress upon the fact that the Angel of the Incarnation was the Archangel Gabriel.

By this time the talk of angels had reached the ears of the Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington. He was greatly exercised.

The angels should be transformed at once.

The discussion had traveled across the seas, and from Archdeacon Sinclair of London came the opinion that angels should be sexless.

Archdeacon Sinclair says that female angels hark back through the influence of the Renaissance to pagan goddesses.

The dictionary throws no light on the subject. It calls an angel "a spiritual, celestial being, superior to man in power and intelligence."

In defence of his feminine angels, Borglum declares that "angels are emblems of sweetness and light, and I did right to make them with the figures and expressions of women."

When he knew that his exquisite work, the Angel of the Annunciation and the Angel of the Resurrection, supposed to have been respectively Gabriel and Michael, were to be ordered transformed from feminine lovelinss to masculine sternness, he broke them to bits, in a frenzy of disappointment.

Now he regrets it. He says he was worse than a vandal—he was a murderer. But he could not bear to change them from their original beauty.

In accordance with orders, he will make new angels, masculine in outline and expression. And—he still retains his own ideas.

If the matter should go so far as to become a matter of ecclesiastical law it might amount to a wholesale transformation of angels which should be worthwhile in its sweep.

And angels that for years have inspired noble thoughts, as one gazed into their Madonna-like faces, may give way to the stronger, sterner faces of men.

Here are two famous paintings of angels, showing both the man and woman types. The upper picture is Guido Reni's "Archangel Gabriel." The lower picture is a reproduction of L. Faleno's "Toward a Better World."

Use Every Minute of Your Time to Improve Yourself

By Beatrice Fairfax.

THE playtime of the year is over, girls, and now comes the time for doing good work and showing what you are made of.

Make up your minds that during the coming Winter you will do something to improve yourselves, mentally or physically, or both.

It is easier to work in the cool weather, one feels like achieving great things.

Brains and muscles are eager for exercise.

See if you can't find something in which to interest yourself during the Winter, so that by Spring you will be conscious that you have decidedly "grown" in some direction or other.

If you suffer the drawbacks of a limited education, pick out some line of study and work at it with all your heart and energy.

If you can afford it, join some social or athletic club and reap the benefits of mingling with your fellow beings or developing yourself physically.

Or get together a few of you and form clubs of your own.

A walking club of young men and women, to meet once a week, will afford its members a great deal of pleasure.

Or, you might start a reading club and take turns reading aloud one or two evenings each week. Spend one-half the evening reading some good history and the other half over an interesting novel.

Then you could have coffee and cake.

You could take turns meeting at each other's homes.

Make up your minds to succeed in your work as you never have before.

Put your very best efforts into it.

Say to yourself, "I am going to improve myself this Winter, and at the end of it I intend to be more of a woman than I ever have been before."

Don't waste a minute. Time is more precious than diamonds and rubies.

All your endeavor won't bring back one lost moment; never forget that.

I would advise every girl to try and do a little bit of good reading during the long Winter evenings.

The public libraries are open to all, and interesting books can be picked up at the second-hand book shops for almost nothing.

If you do not care for reading, find some other diversion that will keep your mind and interest stimulated.

Get a hobby of some kind. There is nothing like a hobby to keep one interested.

Don't let the Winter pass without getting some good out of it.

Take "Self Improvement" for your motto, and keep the words bright and shining before you all Winter.

In the Spring you will be a happy girl if you feel you have lived up to your motto.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

BE TRUE TO HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two years ago I met a young man just out of high school and fell in love with him. I went with him for a year, and he told me often he loved me, but a year ago he went in the army and he asked me to wait for him, which I said I would because I dearly love him. I hear from him once a week. Last Spring I met a very nice young man at a party and am going out with him ever since. Now this young man is dead in love with me and has asked me to become engaged to him. He makes $18 a week and I am sure would make a good husband. I care for him a little, he because he is so kind. The only fault I find is he is so little. What shall I do?

F.T.P.

I THINK you love the first young man best and I would advise you to remain true to him. However, if you carry on a flirtation with the second the first will be sure to hear about it and there will be trouble. Consult your heart and you will be able to decide which one you care most for.

TWO STRINGS TO HIS BOW

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man for the past three years, and out of that time I kept company with him for two years. The other year we were angry, and during that time he became acquainted with a young lady out of the city.

We have renewed our friendship again, and lately he has heard some talk which is not true, but I think he is inclined to believe it.

He is going to pay a visit to this girl's home. What do you think I ought to do? Would you advise me to give him up or ask him what are his intentions toward me?

ANXIOUS.

DO not think of asking him his intentions. Honor, however, let him see that he cannot have both of you, and if he chooses the other girl let him go to her. It may be that he only wishes to pay her a friendly visit. There would be no harm in that. Find out the truth before you take any steps to break your friendship.

PASTRY POINTERS

THE chief things to observe in producing good pastry are that all the utensils should be clean and free from dust, that the paste should be perfectly dry and of the best quality possible, and the butter, lard or dripping perfectly fresh.

Finely chopped suet is a very economical substitute for butter, but this kind of pastry should always be served hot.

When mixing the paste, add the water gradually, working it together with a wooden spoon, and kneading till quite smooth. A cool hand and a light touch are very essential to insure good pastry, while if possible a marble slab is preferable to a board for rolling out the paste. Nowadays, too, glass rolling pins may be purchased, which are better than the wooden ones.

Rich, light pastry must be quickly made and quickly baked; if allowed to stand long before putting in the oven it becomes heavy.

To make puff paste, take half a pound of butter and half a pound of flour, and work the flour into a smooth paste with a quarter of a pint of water, mixing with a knife. Roll out to an inch thickness, break two ounces of butter into small pieces, lay on the paste, sifting some flour over, fold the paste, roll out again, using another two ounces of butter with flour as before, repeating twice more until the butter is all used.

Flour both rolling pin and board to prevent sticking, and be sure the oven is quite hot before putting the pastry in, a brisk oven being essential. It is wise to put in a small piece of paste to test the heat. About twenty or thirty minutes is the average time, according to the thickness of the paste.

"CONVICT 99"

The Story of an Irish-American, a Prisoner for Love, Persecuted in an English Prison

SYNOPSIS.

SERVING a life sentence in an English prison at Grimsby, Laurence Craig goes to support his rival, Ralph Vickers, of his sweetheart, Kosteen, of which he had been convicted, forgiding Kate, the latter begins to believe that Vickers, who had bribed Warder Gannaway to aid Craig, was false to his pretty. Craig was rescued in trying to escape, Gannaway sent Vickers a message which made him believe Craig was dead. Vickers, in a fit of remorse, left Irish plank and a resolution built up by the friendship of Revolutionary Irishmen in the north.

He has forfeited for seats to come in right here to write to Geraldine Lucas, the girl he loves, her father tries to persuade her to wed Ralph. Geraldine, however, is true to Laurence and refuses to marry Ralph. Ralph and Vickers bribe Gannaway to help them get Laurence out of prison. Gannaway, for a certain sum, agrees to do so. Laurence is sentenced to three dozen lashes and six months in chains.

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued

LAURENCE heard this reply with supposedly indifference. Only a flesh wound! Why, the cord had gone within an inch of killing him.

"And the man is continually losing his marks—he is insubordinate?"

"Very insubordinate. The officers of his ward are continually having trouble with him."

The Governor turned to his superior and made some remarks in consideration of Warder Gannaway. Then, addressing Laurence again, he asked:

"Number 99, what have you to say in excuse for the very serious offence that you are charged with?"

"I have nothing to say, sir," replied Laurence, "except that my life here was unbearable. I believe that the day warder of my gang—Gannaway—has been bribed by some one outside to get toward me with unnecessary cruelty. Others, too, have suspected it."

Three Dozen Lashes

"Impossible—utterly impossible!" angrily retorted the Governor.

"I observe an entry here," said the director, referring to the book, "referring to the visit of a Mr. and Miss Lucas. Did either of these have any conversation with prisoner?"

"No," said Captain Pedmore; "they saw no one but myself and the chaplain."

Laurence, in a carriage, and drove away again at once. The prisoner was in the punishment cells as the time, and, of course, could not have communicated.

"Quite so. I can see he's one of the worst of the gang, although I should not have thought so from his face," said the Governor. "Let him be flogged. Give him three dozen."

The Governor then addressed Laurence who had grown deadly pale.

"For the offence you have committed the punishment must be severe. On your discharge from the infirmary you will be taken to the punishment cells for a month. You will have three lashes and six months in chains."

The signal being given, the assistant warder led the prisoner away.

Stunned in brain as if from a heavy physical blow, Laurence walked dumbly back to the infirmary ward. It was strange that he did not collide with the walls and doors on the way, for he moved like a sleep walker, seeing nothing, hearing nothing. Even the bitter cold could not rouse him to consciousness.

Once or twice, from sheer bodily weakness, he swayed, and would have fallen, but for the support of the warder at his side. He was put into bed. For hours he lay in the same torpor, speechless and motionless. But when night came his dauntless spirit awoke. Agony filled his soul—agony mingled with bodily pain and of bitter, intolerable humiliation and indignation.

He turned on his pillow with a sharp, fierce cry.

The night warder came to his bedside, but, finding that he wanted nothing, went away again, muttering a reproach. Laurence did not heed him, but lay with clenched fists and fevered brain. He was terribly near to madness then.

The lash—for him!

His whole body revolted—not from cowardice, for he was no coward. It was not the physical pain that he most dreaded. It was the sibilant shame, the branding outrage to his manhood. He writhed as the thought of it burned into his brain. Was there no escape.

A lurid idea came to him. There was death! He was burning and shivering at once from the dangerous cold that his journey across the cold exercise yard had given him. He would refuse to eat. He would tear open again his half-healed wound. His fingers moved with the intention, when a sudden thought restrained him.

There was Geraldine. If he were to die he would be separated from her forever. No, he would recover. Hope and love of life sprang up again within him, though still the words that had stunned him rang in his ears.

"The lash! The lash! The lash."

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Typewritten Letter.

"ALL, James, you here? I want to ask you something. Come into the library."

"Yes, miss," said the office boy, who had been sent that morning to Fenton Court with a message from Ralph Vickers to his master. The boy followed Geraldine into the large warm room. He stood near the door, twirling his hat nervously between his fingers.

"Have you discovered anything more about that letter in my handwriting that you mentioned some time ago?"

"Why, no, miss, I don't know as I have. I never seen it again, not that same one. But—"

"But what?" interrupted Geraldine, observing a change in his expression. "Have you seen another?"

"Not in your handwriting, miss. But I was just wondering if a letter as Mr. Vickers was writing the other day was anything that would interest you. It was a typewritten letter, you know. Mr. Vickers is a gent at that typewriting machine. His words are just as plain as if they were printed."

"Tell me about it," said Geraldine, encouragingly.

"Well, miss, the letter that I was speak ing of was not on the regular office paper, and I put my eye on it when he went outside with Mr. Lucas. He would have been in a wild state if he knew that I seen it, I reckon."

"Why, do you mean that the letter was not a business one—that Mr. Vickers had some reason for not wishing it to be seen?" Geraldine asked.

"That's just about the size of it, miss. You see, Mr. Vickers is, a cute one, when he wants to do anything for himself."

"Well, and you read the letter?"

"Why, no, I didn't read it all, because it wasn't finished, don't you know. What I did see was something about a hundred pounds that Mr. Vickers—No, I'm telling you wrong, it was not Mr. Vickers that was sending off the money, but Mr. John Hardy, which, if you ask me"—

The boy hesitated. Geraldine moved impatiently.

"Who is Mr. John Hardy?" she asked.

"That's the very question I was asking myself, miss. He has nothing to do with the office! I know that much anyway, says I; and being as the letter said, as Mr. John Hardy sends herewith a hundred pounds in Bank of England notes, and will be obliged by your reading of a newspaper acknowledgment of the same, in the usual way, I was a bit puzzled, miss."

MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Will want to read next SUNDAY'S great BOSTON AMERICAN. It will contain among the illustrated features many valuable and interesting features.

How to move and care for house plants for the Winter—by a Boston expert.

How the oldest justice in the United States spends his days in working hard and enjoying life.

An unusual story of the great life success of an important Boston man, with his rules on "How to Succeed."

A distinguished college professor, "the moon expert," tells of his Summer's discoveries on "How the Moon Originally Jumped Off the Earth."

A Sunday sermon for everybody.

How the people in a New England town are, at last, going to erect a monument to the inventor of the cotton gin.

Some important and interesting news of society, with photographs of beautiful women, in the week's news.

Two illustrated features from the theatrical world that you did not know about before.

A page of stage illustrations, with striking reproductions of new photographs of old favorites.

Tales of the Prodigal Son, who is revisiting Boston, the home of his youth.

Some snapshots and sidelights on the political situation.

The new Princess gown, by Mrs. Osborn, creator of fashions for the fashionable women of America.

No. 3 in a series of notable portraits of society leaders. A full page in colors—guess who it is?

Designs for a shirtwaist suit and a cape in the American-Journal-Examiner copyrighted series.

Recent and notable religious art. Scenes in the life of the Saviour strikingly portrayed by modern artists.

Science produces the first absolute proof that the planet Mars is inhabited.

The most enormously vain creatures on earth, interesting new studies of little wasps, flies, and even ugly spiders, who spend half their time hair-dressing, primping, manicuring and posing, just as if they were real beauties.

The newest awfulest fate of would-be actors. How amateur actors who fail to please the audience are dragged into oblivion at the end of a shepherd's crook, propelled by unseen hands.

How the most patient suitor on earth has finally won the girl of his choice.

How night and day members of the murderous Mafia are relentlessly pursuing an Italian priest who has dared to protect his flock and has sent some of the band to jail.

How Paris provides for poor artists and decorates churches.

The third instalment of "When It Was Dark," the tremendously powerful religious novel by Guy Thorne.

A fifty-cent piece of music free.

An illustrated poem and article by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

And for the children—the funniest funny supplement of all the Sunday papers.

Thomas F. Ryan—the Owner of the Decoy Ducks

His Biggest, Fattest Duck Is Cleveland —Decoy for Insurance Victims

Copyright, 1905, by Star Company

Did you see the interesting letter sent by Grover Cleveland to a policyholder of the Equitable?

You know that Thomas F. Ryan owns the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Mr. Ryan is an able man—the cleverest that has climbed up on the backs of the American people in a long time.

He goes out shooting occasionally. He knows the value of a decoy duck—especially a smooth, respectable decoy duck that will fool even the wisest of the real ducks.

In his insurance company he has as a decoy duck the sleek and convincing Mr. Grover Cleveland. This gentleman is supposed to interest himself in the policyholders and their welfare.

He gave his word of honor that he would do so when he became Ryan's tame trustee.

A policyholder wrote to Cleveland. The answer came back, and neither Cleveland nor anybody else knew anything that was in the letter.

The man wanted to know why he had not received a certain notice that Cleveland was supposed to send out—it was a notice intended to fool the policyholders.

Cleveland replied with a circular letter saying, "I have to say that the matters discussed in your letter are having careful consideration by the trustees, and they welcome any suggestions made by you," etc., etc.

The decoy duck was doing his best, only he got mixed. And he proved to this particular policyholder that Mr. Grover Cleveland, chief decoy duck of the Equitable, is simply another asset for getting money out of policyholders—and keeping it.

Did you ever see a decoy duck out on a smooth piece of water above which the wild ducks fly?

The hunter hides in the bushes. And the foolish duck, made bold by the respectable looking decoy, flies slowly down and settles in the water. Then the hidden hunter blows its head off.

Are you that kind of a duck?

Lessons in Municipal Ownership

IX.

Reduced Street Car Fares

By Prof. Frank Parsons

PROF. FRANK PARSONS

THE average fare on the Glasgow trolleys is less than two cents and 35 per cent. of the fares are one cent each. A dozen years ago, before the city took the lines, the private companies collected an average of 3.34 cents per passenger. When the city took the tramways the fares were reduced at once about 33 per cent. and are now 65 per cent. below the former level.

We are paying the same five-cent fare we paid a dozen years ago.

But the Boston service has been greatly improved in that time.

So has the service in Glasgow.

But the service in Boston is certainly better than in Glasgow.

Yes, but that is due to the low legal limit of speed in English cities and to national causes, not to the difference in the form of ownership.

Our buildings are better than those in English cities. London, Glasgow, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, have no such magnificent business blocks as those that adorn our cities.

Our manufactures also are superior to the English. Our labor is more efficient, both in manufactures and in agriculture. One man in America does as much work as two men in England, according to Mulhall, the famous English statistician.

All these things are private in both countries.

Moreover, the true cause of our superior trolley service is further attested by the fact that the private tramways in Great Britain are still more inferior to ours than the public tramways.

The municipal street railways of Glasgow, Liverpool, Leeds and other cities are vastly superior to the private service they replaced, and to the private lines still in operation in London and other English cities.

The wages are higher here.

Yes, but our cars are bigger and our efficiency greater. More work is done by each man employed.

It is not contended that because an average fare in Glasgow of 1¾ cents will pay a large profit into the public treasury that, therefore, the fare in Boston can be 1¾ cents.

But it is reasonable to believe that since the change from private to public ownership in Glasgow resulted in a great reduction of rates, therefore the change from private to public ownership in Boston would be likely to make the rates here lower than they are now.

The true comparison is between here may be different in amount, but will surely be similar in kind to the effects it has produced across the sea.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP LEAGUE

Ward ..... City .....

I, the undersigned, enroll myself a member of the Municipal Ownership League of the city in which I reside. I pledge myself to use every honorable effort to bring about the municipal ownership of public utilities. I believe that city lighting plants to supply the needs of cities and of the citizens as well is one object to be attained.

The attempt now being made to elect a Legislature which will pass measures permitting the establishment of an electric railway monopoly in Massachusetts and granting exclusive franchises to a favored syndicate shows the necessity of a prompt and concerted movement for public ownership by all citizens, irrespective of party.

Little Editorials from the People

PITY THE "CECILS"

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—To me, and possibly to many of your readers, your "Cecil" series of pictures has not been funny; it has been filled with the deepest of pathos. Poor "Cecil"—to be continually "out of a job"! To be denied the right to labor or to use to best advantage, in the effort to gain daily bread, even the poor faculties with which God, or Nature, or his parents have endowed him! When he finally obtains some sort of a job, he learns that he is not suited for it and cannot perform the duties of the position, but must go on, like the Wandering Jew, to another position, only to fail again!

How many "Cecils" are there? How many men with no special ability turn their hands to this or to that occupation, vainly seeking their vocation? The man who has his own portion of the world's work to do, and is able to do it, has found his vocation, be its fruits meagre or plentiful. At any rate, he is doing the work for which he is fitted. But sympathy and pity should be extended to the man who, like "Cecil," with fitness for nothing in particular, wanders from job to job, vainly seeking that wherewith he may clothe, feed, house and educate himself and those near and dear to him.

A Mother's Love

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

I AM in jail and starving. James."

That was all!

From the "City of the Angels," away out on the Coast of Gold, the message was flashed on to the great smoke-covered Metropolis of the Middle West.

There it was put into the hands of the mother for whom it was intended, and the mother-heart ached for the son who was calling upon her in his trouble.

But it is a long way from Chicago to Los Angeles, the two places being separated by more than two thousand miles.

And the mother was poor. She had no bank account, no stocks, or bonds, or mortgages, her sole earthly belongings consisting of a humble little home and its modest furnishings.

But her boy was in trouble, the message told her, and that was enough. No matter about the distance, no matter about the little property she had—she would sell that property, even though it be at a big sacrifice, and start for her sorrowing son!

Oh, the depth of a mother's love! In all the world there's nothing like it! It will go through fire and water, is will brave the lion in his den, it will make any sacrifice, endure any privation, face any danger, in the attempt to reach and save its object!

The little home, with all that it contained, was speedily put into cash, and the mother began her long journey across to the continent. The train went like lightning—and yet to that anxious mother it seemed to creep, so desirous was she of reaching her boy!

Now but the mothers who may happen to read this story will be able to know how she felt—what mingled joy and sorrow, hope and fear, satisfaction and shame alternately possessed her soul as the Iron Horse was bearing her along toward the sunny land where her son lay behind the prison bars!

A mother's love is one thing, the machinery of the law is another, and before the mother reached the City of the Angels the law had tried and sentenced her boy.

But there isn't law enough in all the universe to put a damper on mother-love! It keeps right on loving, law or no law, sentence or no sentence, and will never take "No" for an answer!

So, when this mother got to her journey's end and learned what had happened she did not give up in despair, but went straightway to the judge with her mother's plea, a plea that was as gentle as a lullaby and yet as strong as the forces of the storm—and the judge's eyes filled with tears, as he remembered his own mother and the mighty love wherewith she loved him!

Taking hold of the woman's hand the judge looked through misty eyes into her sorrowful face and assured her that he would do all that he could for her and for her boy.

It doth not yet appear what the result will be, but of one thing we may be sure, that mother's love is not going to grow cold and die. In the City of the Angels, homeless, friendless, a stranger in a strange land, that mother will stand by her boy to the end!

Throughout the lonely days, and the still lonelier vigils of the night, she will hum over to herself the little slumber songs she used to sing when her boy was a babe in her arms. The vision of the baby face and baby pranks will come to her over and over again, and for the culprit beyond the bars she will feel all of the old-time affection!

Ah, yes, the depth of a mother's love!

There's a moral to our story, which moral may be put in the shape of a question:

"Boys! can you afford to despise a love like this? In a word, can you afford, under any circumstances, to go back on mother?"

WHAT DO TEMPERANCE ADVOCATES THINK OF THIS OPINION?

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Being a constant reader of your paper, I am especially interested in your editorials in which there is pictured the real life of a drunkard. These pictures are well known to the drunken man himself.

For centuries in every country these pictures have been shown to them by preachers, teachers and others, but still the barrooms are flourishing, and the prisons, asylums and hospitals are well patronized by the victims of the rumsellers.

The law considers drunkenness as a crime, therefore a drunkard ought to be punished by imprisonment or fine; modern scientists consider it as a disease, so the State ought to establish sanitariums for the treatment of drunkards. But, in my humble opinion, drunkenness is neither a crime which can be prevented by punishment, nor a disease which can be cured by medicine or prevented by isolating the drunkard in some sanitarium.

According to my way of thinking, the remedy to lessen the evil of drunkenness is this: Let no liquor containing alcohol be sold to be drunk on the premises. Let everyone desirous of a stimulant or even to get intoxicated take his liquor to his home.

"What is your occupation, friend?" A stranger asked of me.

"Good, sir," I said, "at present I Am following the sea."

"And yours?" I asked (I noticed that He sipsipped as he went).

"Oh, I'm a crooked stick," said he; "I'm following my bent."
